ROOSEVELT LASHES WAR TALK

Today

Lenin Was Too Much
The Positron Arrives
A Sad Mother's Day
Upside Down Flying

—By Arthur Brisbane—

Mr. John D. Rockefeller, Jr.'s, family, interested in encouragement of art, engaged a brilliant Mexican, Diego Rivera, to paint pictures on the walls of a great building of Rockefeller Center. Rivera believed in Communism, but that naturally did not prevent his being employed.

But when Rivera painted Lenin in a place of honor on the Rockefeller wall, that seemed pushing "toleration" too far. Rivera was paid in full, dropped and Lenin was removed.

The brilliant young Mexican, who feels badly, should ask himself what his friends in Russia, Stalin, for instance, would have done, had they engaged an American artist to decorate the Russian temple of Labor, and the American artist had selected John D. Rockefeller for the most striking feature of his decoration. That picture would have come down, and the American artist would not have been paid in full, at least, not in money.

Science concentrates on its newest pet, the "positron," thus named because it is a free, "positive electron," one of the inconceivably small things of which light, life, electricity and all matter are formed. When you meet a "positron" it goes right through you and continues on.

The study of the "positron" may tell more about Dr. Millikan's "cosmic rays," and enlighten us also on the "galactic rays" that come from somewhere out in the Milky Way. A strange, sibilant static in your radio may mean galactic messengers possessing a 146-meter wave, a frequency of twenty million cycles a second.

Where we mortals stand, some things, like suns in space that are one million million times as big as this earth, and other things like the atom of which you could have a million in the corner of your eye without knowing it, are too big or too small. However, Providence knows what is best for us.

Sunday was a sad "Mother's Day" for Mrs. Bogdonowitz, who lived with her son in his "hideout," on Long Island. John was a good son. On his arm he had tattooed, "I love my mother," and across his chest in big letters, the same words, "MOTHER," no young girl, cupid or bow and arrow. And on Mother's Day he spent a dollar for flowers.

All this did not save him. As he lay asleep yesterday morning on a sun porch, his mother nearby, three men speeding by in an auto killed him with seven shots.

It was one of the "usual killings" of our crime wave. His brother had died in the electric chair, another brother is serving a term in the penitentiary. In this case, it is the sin of the children visited on the mother.

Italy still holds the "upside down" flying record. The previous record, held by an Italian, Capt. Raffaele Colacicchi, of 41 minutes, is broken by another Italian, Lieut. Guglielmo Bonzio, who flew upside down for an hour and five minutes last Sunday. Doctors afterward said his condition was normal.

In a way, Uncle Sam has been flying upside down longer than that, named, since 1920, but, unfortunately, his condition is NOT quite normal.

Naturalists, studying the brain of a three-year-old baby gorilla, dead in Washington, after Mrs. Eleanor Dickey vainly supplied for it an oxygen tent, are amazed. The young gorilla had the finest brain ever seen outside of human skulls, weighing 466.6 grams a little more than a pound. Had the young gorilla lived it's brain might have weighed 600 grams.

Most surprising was the depth of the convolutions, or wrinkles, of that brain. Thinking ability depends on those convolutions. Haldane says the Negro descends from the gorilla, the Mongolian from the orangoutang, the white race from the chimpanzee. He may be mistaken.

Human brains vary greatly in weight. The lightest normal brain weighs about 1100 grams. One of the heaviest ever weighed was that of Cuvier, the great naturalist. There is nothing to prove that the gorilla brain would have continued to grow. In babyhood a gorilla is more human in appearance than later on. His brain might stop growing, and even lose its convolutions.

A critical week for Europe opened yesterday, according to the "bigwigs" of the big powers. Hitler's inclination to tell other nations what to do and how to do it, stirs real alarm among the big powers.

Britain and France are again united to check Germany. Tomorrow Hitler is expected to tell the Reichstag what his armament plans are. Much may depend on what he says.

It seems incredible that he should think of inviting the French air fleet of 5000 planes to start bombardment of German cities and factories. That may happen.

$3.50 Lowell Factory Pay for Family of 4

SWEATSHOPS' HELP CAN'T BUY FOOD

Lowell Toiler Paid $3 Week Has to Put His Family on a "Diet"

Pictures on Pages 2 and 8

By RUTH MUGGLEBEE

(This is the second of a series of articles on working conditions in Lowell. The third will appear in tomorrow's Boston Evening American.)

Budgeting a three-dollar weekly income, that continued over a period of six weeks, a Lowell shoe worker was forced to place his wife and his two young sons on a diet of salt pork, potatoes and onions made into a stew.

Six weeks before he struck, along with some 4000 other shoe and wood heel workers against low wages in certain Lowell factories, he earned $3.50.

The week he joined the ranks of protesting Lowell workers, he made $8. Very often he worked from 50 to 60 hours and a good many nights, but only once in his year's employment at the Becker Brothers Shoe Co., did he earn a weekly pay o: $14.

Extra Time Fails to Net a Living Wage

Telling a story of struggle against industrial odds, this man worked on a piece rate basis of five cents a case, and although he forfeited 15 or 20 minutes of his lunch-hour to finish the cases of work that were placed before him, he couldn't swell his weekly income to a living wage.

Lowell's contribution to the sweatshop menace is part of a state-wide picture of unhealthful conditions and unbelievable pay envelopes that was disclosed by the investigation conducted by the Boston Evening American, the Sunday Advertiser and Massachusetts State Bureau of Industries and the Consumers' League of Massachusetts, and the Simmons College School of Social Work.

Family Lives on Salt Pork and Potatoes

Lowell, once a powerful textile centre of the country, has its share of sweatshops, Mayor Charles Slowey admitted, but like every industrial city has suffered by the influx of owners, principally from New York, due to economic changes.

As an inner sole tacker, this

More Mills Increase Wages

Wage increases were announced by two more New England concerns today.

Employes of W. A. Emerson's Sons, Inc., whose factory is at Hampstead, N. H. received a voluntary five per cent advance yesterday and will be given an additional increase of 7½ per cent upon completion of present orders.

"Last month was our largest monthly production in the 46 years of this firm's existence," said Vice-President Stanley Wass of 72 Lincoln st., Boston, who announced the increases.

President Richard Lenihan of the Hamilton Woolen Co., Inc., of Southbridge, announced that beginning next Monday wages throughout the mill will be increased 5 per cent.

Yesterday 10,000 employes of the Amoskeag Mills and the International Shoe Co. of Manchester, N. H., received, respectively, 15 and 10 per cent raises.

Daughter Finds Home Ablaze

An engagement which kept her out until early today resulted in Josephine Putis, 18, of Stoneham, saving her entire family from possible death by fire.

Arriving at her home in Bracket ave., after midnight, Josephine saw that the entire first floor was ablaze. Knowing that her parents, two brothers and a sister were asleep on the second floor, she shouted and pounded on the door, and windows. Joseph Putis, her father, aroused by the noise, awoke in a smoke-filled bedroom.

Salt Firm Head Dies in Plunge

New York, May 16 (AP)—George Lester Ball, 42, vice-president of the Independent Salt Co., either jumped or fell to his death from his room on the ninth floor of Doctors' Hospital where he had been under treatment for a nervous condition.

His nurse, Miss Marion McNamara, told police that on her return from the dining room she found the window open and Ball missing.

Vicious Dog to Guard Malden Home

John J. Barry, of 30 Wicklow st., Malden, is considering buying an ugly dog, or maintaining a permanent police guard at his home. For the third time in two months an attempt was made to break into his home last night but, like the other two attempts, it was not successful.

Claim Mitchell Fraud $858,429

U. S. CHARGES BANKER GIFT WAS THEFT

"Handed Wife 18,300 Shares of Stock to Evade Income Tax"

New York, May 16 (INS)—Charles E. Mitchell, former head of the National City Bank, today was charged directly with deliberately perpetrating two "fake" stock sales to evade $858,429 income tax payments in 1929 and 1930.

In the opening address to the jury by U. S. Atty. George Z. Medalie at the trial of the banker for income tax evasion, the defendant's sale of 18,300 shares of stock to "his wife" was labeled "a sham and a pretense."

"The representation of such a sale was false and intended to deceive the government to save the private property of the defendant," said Medalie.

"The defendant wrote a letter to his wife and she wrote a letter back to him. By these communications it was pretended a sale had taken place.

CRIES "FAKE SALE."

"It was intended to pretend that Mrs. Mitchell bought the 18,300 shares of National City Bank stock and Mitchell bought it back at $312 a share.

"The transaction was so unreal that the tax stamps were not paid for on the stock transaction.

"To show how unreal this transaction was—the 18,300 shares of stock were in the block of 58,-0 200 shares in the possession of J. P. Morgan & Co. for a loan of $6,000,000. The stock was put up with Morgan as collateral and Mitchell—not Mrs. Mitchell, mind you—paid the interest on the loan."

$3,500,000 "LOSS"

When Mitchell bought back the stock from his wife at $312, the stock was selling for $40 a share, according to Medalie.

"And Mitchell claimed a loss og $2,800,000," the prosecutor said.

He added that Mrs. Mitchell had 500 shares of National City Bank stock—her own stock— which she treated as separatef rom the 18,300 shares.

"Perhaps Mrs. Mitchell did not understand the transaction, but certainly the head of one of the largest investments and banking concerns in the world understood what he was doing," sed Medalie.

SPOT VICTIM, HID BEHIND MOUSTACHE

Because of a little black mustache, George Brogna, gangster and racketman, is dead today, with three bullets in his head, instead of being in jail.

The police, who couldn't find him, have another unsolved gang murder on their hands—because they couldn't find him.

Disguised by a few black hairs on his upper lip, he walked undetected daily for five months among the police, who wanted him for bail jumping, robbery, murder and lesser indiscretions. He didn't even wear smoked glasses.

But the little moustache proved in the end, his undoing, for gangland, which wanted him just as badly as did the police, became suspicious of it.

DON'T KNOW WHY

They lifted up the moustache and there was Brogna. They jerked him into a stolen car and took him for a ride. In Revere they beat him with a milk bottle, propped him up in the front seat and then put three holes in his head from behind.

Gangland probably told him just why he was being beaten and just why he was going to die. But there were so many things in Brogna's 18-year criminal career, which began with burglary at the age of 8, that police aren't sure just why he was murdered.

They think it may have been because of the New Year's Eve slaying of Michael (Big Mike) Richardi, North Revere night club manager. There is a warrant charging Brogna with this murder. They also think it may have been because of the shotgun slaying of Philip (Sphinx-Face) Toscano, gangster, in 1931, 50 yards from the spot where Brogna's body was found last night.

DRAGNET IS OUT

Anyway, sought for one unsolved gang murder, Brogna became the victim of another, and the police "dragnet" is out again for his slayers, who by this time are probably holed up in a hothouse, somewhere, sprinkling water on their upper lips and hoping for a quick crop of moustaches.

Brogna's body was found at Fenno and Borden sts., Revere. It was in Borden st. that the body of Toscano was found in November, 1931.

He had been hit on the head eight times with a milk bottle and apparently shot while unconscious. Some fingerprints were found on the murder car, 100 feet beyond the body.

KNOWN AS BAD ACTOR

Brogna was a punch-drunk thug, known as a bad talker and a bad actor. His father, Patsy, of Liverpool st., East Boston, said he had warned him to keep away from gangsters.

His wife said she hadn't seen him for months. There is a little girl, Mary, 4, who lives with the grandparents, and a baby boy. George 2, who is in City Hospital with measles, scarlet fever and pneumonia. The father said the wife told him Brogna was down South, working on a farm.

Hitch-Hiker Robs Friendly Driver

Shelburne Falls, May 16 (AP)—Edwin H. Minard, 19, of Taunton, was arrested near here on charges of robbing Morris L. Ullman of Boston and forcing him from his auto after Ullman had picked him up as a hitch-hiker.

BEAUTY FIGHTS DIVORCE

A Birmingham (Ala.) divorcee took the stand in Newport, R. I., today and testified to further alleged misbehavior on the part of Mrs. Eugenia Woodward Jelke, 26, in the counter divorce actions filed by her and her husband, F. Frazier Jelke, 52-year-old New York society broker.

ROSSINI KILLS SELF WITH GAS

Dante Rossini, 54, a Quincy musician, committed suicide with great care and precision today in his home on Franklin st., South Quincy.

"Don't make a mystery of this; I'm just tired of living," he wrote in a note which he left for the police.

He laid his best suit on the bed, beside it a good necktie and nearby a pair of newly polished shoes. These clothes were for the burial.

He carefully labeled all the musical instruments in the house, belonging to his pupils so that they would go to the owners without confusion.

He then wrote two more notes, one to a son in Providence, R. I., and the other to a brother in Brooklyn, N. Y.

After that he closed the doors and windows, stuffed newspapers in the chinks and stretched a tube from the gas range to the table. Turning on the gas he lay down on the table with two pillows under his head.

Mrs. Yolanda Buccani, who lives upstairs, smelled gas and looked in the window. Police broke in the doors. Rossini had been dead about four hours.

Police said that in addition to being tired of life, he had financial worries.

He was head of the Rossini Boys' Band of Quincy, and was organizing a municipal band to play this summer at Merrymount park. A short time ago he was elected Grand Venerable of the Quincy lodge, Sons of Italy. He was a native of Rome, and was a widower.

2500 Needlework Strikers Balked in Parade

One man was arrested and police broke up a parade of 2500 striking garment workers who walked out in general strike today in protest against alleged sweat-shop conditions in about 100 local shops.

As the parade, formed in the vicinity of Albany st. and marched up Kneeland st., police ordered the leaders to break it up as they had no permit. The strikers obeyed and went in groups to Peters Hall.

The opening note was struck when 300 pickets marched up and down at the entrances of factories chanting "Don't go to work, general strike."

Thirty-two police officers threaded their way through the milling hundreds keeping order.

Despite the seriousness of the situation, a semi-holiday spirit prevailed until Simon Shapiro of Wilcox st., Roxbury, was arrested by Sergt. Robert Lynch for distributing handbills without a permit.

The strike, according to Philip Kramer and Isreal Feinberg, vice-presidents of the International Ladies' Garment Workers local, is a protest against sweatshop conditions, low wages and long hours.

Workers are receiving an average of $9 a week for from 40 to 50 hours' work, they claim. Feinberg says that the union will demand $1 an hour for machine workers; $45 a week for cutters and a minimum of $1.25 an hour for pressers.

The strike started shortly after 7 o'clock this morning with a parade of pickets to their posts.

It was estimated that about 1000 workers had refused to join the strike today. About 9 o'clock, the pickets started the parade from Kneland st., the heart of the strike area.

CORN MEAL AND BACON FOR LOW PAID WORKERS

POVERTY WAGE LEAVES MARK ON FAMILIES

Food Fare of Family of Four Bared by Father

Becker Brothers shoe worker handled the last and inner sole of 72 shoes three times before he could chalk up five cents to his credit.

With his wife and two boys, he paid $2.50 weekly rent for a four-room tenement apartment.

They lived on potatoes and salt pork at ten cents a pound. They ate cornmeal and bacon scraps. Or changing the form of a diet whose ingredients of necessity were the same, they fried potatoes in the grease given off in the frying of the pork.

$8 High Pay for Week With Overtime

They toured the markets for food bargains, watching their pennies in a budget that was carefully mapped out.

"I couldn't have done it with any other woman," he said. "My wife scrimped and read the papers for advertisements and, although it wasn't living, we managed to keep going."

Losing his shoe job in Lynn, Mr. B. went to Lowell and sought a chance at his trade.

He worked hard and long hours but the most, he said, he could make was between $6 and $8 on an average. He worked Saturday afternoons and a few hours overtime at night and during his noon-hours. A year ago at the same type of work in a Lynn factory he made 18 cents a case, he told.

Worked Two Jobs Just to Get Food

"We bought the cheapest food we could buy trying to make a $1 weekly income go a long way. At that time my mother-in-law lived with us," he continued. "We bought bread at two loaves for five cents. We paid eight cents a quart for milk for the children.

"When I first went to work for the Becker Brothers, I was paid six cents a case. Last fall we were laid off and I was forced to loaf for two months. I returned to the shop on the basis of five cents a case. I was a married man with two children and a wife and I had to take it.

"The most I ever made during the year was $14, although the average was quite a bit less."

Injuring legitimate business by practices of undercutting and underselling, flooding the markets with cheap merchandise, sub-standard shops are throwing thousands of workers on the dole lists.

In today's instalment, stories selected from men and women workers that reveal the story of low wages with cold, bare facts, are told.

Here's a story about a worker who combined two jobs in the hope of getting a combined income that would meet the human wants of himself, his wife and two sons, aged 10 and 8.

From 7:15 a. m. until 5 o'clock in the afternoon he worked as a vamper at the Laganas Shoe Co. His last week's pay for that, prior to the strike, was $10.15. From 5:30 p. m. until 9:30 p. m. he did the same job at the Merrimack Shoe Co. and for this operation worked out in a full week's labor, he made $4.05.

"That $4.05 was the highest pay I made for night work," he said, at an operation that calls for special skill, stitching together the vamps and the quarters of the shoe.

Pay Drops From $20 to $6 a Week

As a worker of 19 years' experience who four years ago made weekly incomes of $48, today for about 72 hours of labor a week, he can take home only $14.72.

"I made no more than $12 a week at the Laganas factory," he said, "so I had to try the combined shift. I did this for a month."

His monthly family expense entails a rental of $30 in addition to food bills.

"But I had saved some money from those days when my weekly earnings were good," he went on. "That's how I'm living now. But the savings are getting lower and lower."

Another worker, a girl, who last year made as high as $20.88, this year at Becker Brothers Shoe Co., averaged between $6 and $7 a week.

For almost two months, another girl, working at the same plant, made in the neighborhood of 36 cents for a week's employment, obliged to spend a full week's time at the factory or lose her turn when the work came around.

Marie, who went to the Merrimack Shoe Co., after another concern closed, worked there

Low Factory Wages Leaves Imprint on Families of Lowell Workers

FACING LOSS OF HOME

This one time happy family is facing the loss of its home due to the low wage scale in Lowell factories. They are John Manikas, Mrs. Manikas, both of 902 Varnum ave., Lowell, and their children, James, 16; Alexandria, 13; George, eight, and their 11-months-old son. A morigage on their home is to be foreclosed unless interest, now overdue on the note, is paid. Manikas, until the recent shoe strike was called at Lowell, worked as a shoe finisher at the factory of the Becker Shoe Co.

LOW WAGES—BACK TO HIGH SCHOOL

Panagiota Costopulous, 16, of 121 Lexington st., Lowell, values a high school education now. She tried working in a Lowell factory for nine weeks but when her highest weekly wage totalled but $2.32 she gave up the job and returned to her classroom. She is now a sophomore at the Lowell High School. (Boston American Photo.)

O'CONNELL HITS ELY PLAN FOR SALES TAX

Hurts the Masses and Thus Retailers, Says Head of Slattery

Vigorous opposition to the sales tax provision of Gov. Ely's $25,000,000 emergency taxation bill was voiced by R. A. O'Connell, president of the E. T. Slattery Co. today.

On behalf of the Retail Trade Board of Boston, of which he is vice-president, O'Connell appeared at the hearing on the bill before the House ways and means committee in the State House.

"Any measure that hurts the masses of our people," O'Connell declared, "hurts our retail business, and to hurt retail business means to hurt every branch of industry."

He then went on, quoting facts and figures, to show how difficult it would be for retailers to pass the tax along to the consumer. The alternative of having the retailer absorb the tax would put an impossible burden on retailers who are fighting desperately against increasing losses to stay in business.

SOLID BACKING

O'Connells arguments had the backing of an imposing array of business groups. Lined up solidly behind him were the chambers of commerce of Lowell, Quincy, Waltham, Salem, Worcester, Springfield, New Bedford, Haverhill, Northampton, Lawrence and Greenfield.

New England Hardware Dealers' Association, the Massachusetts Jewelers' Association and the Greater Boston Restaurant Association were also listed with the opponents of the bill.

"We believe the sales tax will greatly impede economy programs that have been started in Massachusetts communities," O'Connell continued. "Large new sources of revenue do not make for either economy or efficiency on the part of local governments.

PROOF OF MISMANAGEMENT.

"Cities and towns in the State have not yet realized that they must cut their costs in keeping with the ability of taxpayers to pay. We believe that when a municipality reaches a point where through mismanagement it cannot meet its payroll, that alone should be sufficient proof of mismanagement to justify the State in taking over the supervision of that municipality."

O'Connell concluded his arguments against the sales tax by pointing out that it is unnecessary. Beer taxes, diversion of the gasoline tax, federal aid and drastic cuts in municipal and county expense, he said, would provide the revenue needed.

MAYOR SEEKING PEACE

MAYOR SLOWEY

Mayor Charles H. Slowey, of Lowell, today placed himself on record as against sweatshops.

"I'm naturally against sweatshops," he declared. "I believe in better working conditions for workers and I sincerely hope that the state of Massachusetts will legislate to abolish the improper conditions of all industries.

"Everybody knows that we have had in Lowell a fair and beautiful city. And if Lowell is now going through industrial stress, it is no greater than the suffering which has come to all industrial centers hard hit by the depression.

"Lowell is a natural industrial city, and has been so for the past 75 years. One can't go anywhere and get better workers than right here in Lowell. Lowell has her share of sweatshops just like every other industrial city. What are we going to do about it?"

Mayor Slowey, through an enlarged committee of Lowell citizens, representing every nationality, is trying to reconcile the terms of the manufacturers to the demands of the strikers.

Although a deadlock exists at present, he has hopes of bringing about an amicable settlement between all the parties, anxious to send the workers back to their jobs.

POVERTY PAY TAKES SISTERS OUT OF CLASSROOM

Low Wages Cost Lowell Twins Scholastic Aims

But today both are factory workers in Lowell.

Not yet 17, the two girls have worked for wages that have hardly paid for the incidental expenses which every girl must meet.

They walk to and from work. They walk home for lunches.

Josephine, young, pretty, and interested in getting ahead, handled 400 pieces in a case of 72 shoes at 10 cents for the 36 pairs. For a year and a half she has marked shoes, put the right mates together, sorting out quarters, vamps, heel covers and facings as part of her job but at times she averaged from 75 cents to $2 for a full week's work.

She is one of a family of seven, including her mother and father and like the member of a large family, she had to leave school at the age of 15 to take her place in industry to bring home a few dollars.

"I just had to go to work," she began. "My father worked in a restaurant as a dishwasher. He worked nights and made $10 a week and then he lost his job. My mother has been sick for several years and still must make weekly tirps into Boston to the Massachusetts General Hospital for treatments.

"No one is working in my family now. My sister and I, who helped support the family are on strike so there is nothing coming in. You see, I have a sister who is 13 and a half years, a brother, 11, and a smaller brother, 7.

"My twin sister worked on a lacing machine doing piece work. But she only made between $6 and $7 a week. See, this pay envelope is hers—for $5.41. My mother used to be a weaver in the mill before she took sick about five years ago. Now she can't work.

"I always wanted to be a nurse and my sister wanted to be a stenographer. Even now we talk about how nice it would have been if we could have kept on going to school to take up those jobs instead of slaving away for nothing.

TEN CENTS A MORNING

"We had to turn in all our money and get a little back for ourselves.

"I went to work at the Becker Brothers a year and a half ago. I made around $5 or $6 or $7 a week, working on patch making. Sometimes it was a little less money, but it averaged about that. I did that work for three months. Then they sent me to doing bench work. I couldn't make any money on that job. One week I made 75 cents. Sometimes it was $3. I would just have to sit and wait for work and my turn. There were so many girls on the bench that our turn came around not very often.

"Why there would be mornings that I would only make 10 cents. And sometimes I would have to stay all day and make nothing,

Mother Ill; Father Jobless; Girls Toil On and sometimes all week. One week at bench work I earned 42 cents. Then the boss told me to mark heel covers, but I refused because I wasn't getting paid for them and it took a long time to do it.

"Well he fired me and four other girls for refusing. I was out of work for about three weeks. But then he took us back as he couldn't find anybody to work that kind of a job for so little money.

BEDS IN EVERY ROOM

Josephine, serious in her desire to get above the level of her situation, began to attend night high school. However, the session closed and she had to forsake that idea.

With other members of her family she lives in a five-room tenement house. Beds are in every room save the kitchen to enable the large family to find sleeping quarters.

Saw Them Together in Birmingham Flat, She Testifies

Newport, R. I., May 16 (INS)—An illustration of the apartment in Birmingham Ala., which, she testified was occupied by Mrs. Eugenia "Neenie" Jelke, and a mysterious "major" was drawn in court today by Mrs. Wagner Bailey, Birmingham divorcee, in the divorce suit of E. Frazier Jelke, 52-year-old Wall St. broker, against 26-year-old Mrs. Jelke.

During cross-examination of Mrs. Bailey, Ernest Matthews, of Birmingham, her personal attorney, and J. Von Peterson, head of a New York detective agency, were asked to leave the courtroom.

The niece of the late United States Senator Oscar Underwood of Alabama slipped away from her bridal suite to hold romantic trysts with a local Lothario while she and her middle-aged husband were stopping in a Birmingham hotel in January, 1931, less than a month after their marriage, Mrs. Bailey had testified.

SAW PAIR THERE, SHE SAYS.

Identifying young Mrs. Jelke's companion only as "the Major," Mrs. Bailey drawled her accusations while Newport's socialites hunched forward in their seats to hear everyword.

Mrs. Bailey explained that she went fourteen times to a Birmingham apartment "to see if a gentleman I was interested in was there meeting a certain woman."

"Were you afraid the gentleman was meeting Eugenia Woodward?" she was asked.

"Oh, no!" Mrs. Bailey replied. "He wasn't after her!"

On one of these sleuthing junkets, Mrs. Bailey said, she ran into Mrs. Jelke and "the Major" as they were entering a room.

"They shut the door and stayed in the room about an hour and a half," the divorcee declared, "and the room was disordered when they left it."

Mrs. Bailey said she had known Mrs. Jelke by sight for 15 years but didn't know at that time she was a bride.

SECOND RENDEZVOUS

A few days later, she found Mrs. Jelke and her companion there under the same circumstances as before, Mrs. Bailey said.

Soon afterward, she met Mrs. Jelke at the Birmingham society wedding, and was greatly surprised to learn she had recently become the wife of the New York financier.

Mrs. Jelke, who was seated beside her lawyer while Mrs. Bailey testified, grimaced at this compliment from the witness.

Henry Weston, a New York private detective, and John Manning, a taxi driver, told of seeing Mrs. Jelke and "a tall man with a mustache" leave an apartment in East 83d st, early on the morning of Aug. 3, 1932.

They drove off in a small coupe and Manning and Weston followed them to Long Island City, where they lost the trail in traffic.

"She wore a white 'toiban,' the east side hackman described Mrs. Jelke's hat, while his aristocratic listeners roared with laughter, not even Mrs. Jelke smiled slightly.

JELKE WON'T SETTLE

Just before the trial began there were reports that Mrs. Jelke, who was 25 when she married the 52-year-old clubman, had demanded $225,000 cash to settle their differences out of court.

This was denied by her lawyer, George P. Slade, and Jelke told reporters:

"I won't settle anything. I'm going to bat with the suit. My wife has a mania for money and clothes. It is a regular disease with her!"

$2,000,000 FIRE LEAVES 2000 HOMELESS AT AUBURN

Dense billows of smoke sweeping along the banks of the Little Androscoggin spread like a pall over greater part of Auburn, Me., yesterday to be seen miles away. Throughout the night the flames lighted the sky like a huge beacon. The disastrous blaze is estimated to have destroyed 249 buildings in New Auburn, doing $1,000,000 damage.—Intert News Photos, by George Woodruff

CRASH INJURES 1; 20 SHAKEN

One woman was seriously cut by flying glass and 20 other persons were severely shaken up when a trolley car and milk truck crashed today at Tremont and West Springfield sts., knocking the trolley car from the rails.

Mrs. Edith Noell, 22, of 17 Norwood st., Dorchester, was taken to City Hospital in the ambulance of Warren ave. police station.

Traffic was tied up while Boston Elevated emergency workers put the car back on the rails and towed it away, the passengers being transferred.

Police started an investigation of the cause. The car was outward bound, from the subway to Egleston sq., and was manned by John G. O'Halloran, 29 Wrentham st., Dorchester, motorman, and John Walsh, 69 Childs st., Jamaica Plain, conductor.

The truck was operated by Gordon R. Forrest of 75 Waverly st., Roxbury, according to the police. It was crossing Tremont st. when the accident occurred.

Nearly all the windows in the car were broken by the impact and glass showered on the passengers, some of whom were also jarred from their seats.

Textile Shipments Lead

Washington, May 16 (AP)—Exports from Rhode Island last year were valued by the commerce department at $7,989,504, with shipments of textile machinery heading the list.

$1,000,000 Auburn Blaze Leaves 1600 Homeless

Auburn, Me., May 15 (AP)—New Auburn, suburban section of this city, is a smouldering ruin today, devastated by fire which in less than five hours consumed 249 buildings and made 1400 to 1600 persons homeless. The loss reached $1,000,000, said City Manager F. W. Ford.

It was Maine's second conflagration in a little more than a week. A large part of the city of Ellsworth was destroyed May 7 by a $2,000,000 fire of incendiary origin.

Officials scouted reports that Auburn's blaze was caused by a pyromaniac. City Manager Frederick W. Ford said he believed an oil or gasoline blast in the garage where the fire originated was responsible. The fire was spread by a northeast wind of 30 to 40-mile velocity.

AUTHORITIES CHECK LOSS

Through the night city assessors and fire underwriters worked in the glare of still-flaming ruins to check the extent of the loss.

Starting in a tenement district close by the bank of the Androscoggin river, the fire spread with tremendous rapidity.

Billowing forward and spreading fanwise, the flames consumed three, four and five-story tenement houses before fire departments could lay their hose and direct streams of water against the buckling flames.

Tenants rushed out with arms filled with household effects, sometimes valuable, often inconsequential articles, picked up at random in their frantic haste. Furniture was passed out of windows and piled in the streets, there to be destroyed before conveyance could be found to move it to safety.

FIRE'S ECCENTRIC PATH

The surging flames blazed an eccentric path along the river's bank. They hurdled whole rows of houses, setting random blazes in advance of the fire's main front. Guided by shifting squalls, they zig-zagged through the closely-packed structures, dooming a dwelling house here, sparing one there.

A massive brick synagogue was the early prey of the flames. A parochial school fell next, but the St. Louis Catholic Church, not more than a block away escaped. Its tall brick spires appeared and disappeared through the clouds of smoke and uprushing sheets of flame.

A public school, the Wilson school, remote from the sector where the fire raged fiercest, suddenly burst into flames. Its pupils had been dismissed 20 minutes earlier.

A graveyard, Oak Hill Cemetery, provided the final barrier against the progress of the conflagration. Here firefighters massed themselves, where the area was more sparsely settled and brought the flames within control.

Relief agencies moved speedily on the scene. Four companies of the National Guard from Lewiston and Auburn surrounded the devastated section and patrolled its streets. Red Cross stations sprang up before the flames had run half their course.

KIDNAP JURORS MAY DELAY REPORT

By JOHN H. NOONAN
(Boston Evening American Staff Correspondent.)

Barnstable, May 16—The grand jury hearing charges against Kenneth and Cyril Buck in the Peggy McMath kidnapping case is being given every little scrap of evidence, and there is a probability it may continue to sit through tomorrow, with no report before tomorrow night or Thursday.

Mrs. Nell C. McMath, of Harwichport, mother of the courageous little victim, was the first witness today. Her husband, who bought his daughter's freedom for $60,000 ransom, followed her into the jury room. Then Harold Sawyer, business associate of McMath, Police Chief E. E. Hall of Harwich, and Walter Cahoon, "mystery" witness, neighbor of the Bucks.

Summonses also were issued for Ruth Holmes, school employe who received the hoax phone call to dismiss Peggy from school, and for John Shaughnessy, the boy who actually witnessed the kidnaping.

Dist. Atty. William C. Crossley said he expected General Needham, state police head, and state detectives would testify tomorrow.

SINNOTT RITES HELD TODAY

Funeral services for William J. Sinnott, advertising manager for Raymond's, Inc., for the past 10 years, were held today at the Forest Hills crematory. Out of respect to his memory, Raymond's was closed from 11 to 12 noon.

Mr. Sinnott, who lived at 125 Washington st., Dorchester, died Saturday after an illness of several months. He was 47.

He was an artist and the originator of several comic strips which were circulated nationally. At various times he served on the staffs of the old Boston Journal, the Globe and the Herald-Traveler. He was a native of Boston and educated at English High and the Museum of Fine Arts School.

Surviving him are his wife, the former Miss Katherine D. White of Boston; two sons, Robert and Allen, and five sisters and one brother.

65 DETECTIVES TRACE RIDLEY DEATH CLUES

New York, May 16 (AP)—More than 65 detectives worked today to trace the affairs and connections of Edward A. Ridley aged eccentric millionaire who was slain with his secretary Lee Weinstein, last Wednesday, in Ridley's dark, sub-cellar real estate office.

Arthur John Hoffman, accountant, who was assisting police in an audit of Ridley's accounts, told a friend today.

"It was only by luck that I didn' get what Ridley and his secretary got."

Hoffman said that he had an appointment with Ridley to go over his books at 11 a. m., of the day of the slaying.

"I was unavoidably detained by a tax matter for another client," he said. "I was still in the office when my wife telephoned to see if I was safe. She had read of the murders in the paper."

Hoffman drew up the will in which the aged millionaire had left $200,000 to the slain secretary, conditional upon the secretary surviving him. Weinstein's wife this marriagew as not disclosed until after his death) has said, through her attorney, that she intends to contest for at least a part of the bequest.

Her attorney, J. V. Kilroe, said that she married Weinstein March 11, 1925, at Richmond, Va. Weinstein used the name of Jacqui Leroy Lee, he said, and marriage was performed by Fr. John Fahey, a Catholic priest.

FRIEND HELD IN MYSTERY DEATH

An alleged murder with several mysterious angles came to light today when police arrested Stanley Milller, 27, of St. Mary st., Brookline, charged with homicide and held without bail pending further investigation into the death of his friend, Robert Silver, 29, of Litchfield st., Brighton.

According to Hillier, he was at the Silver home Sunday with Mrs. Silver and her two children, when Silver arrived. There was an argument, he said, between the Silvers as to who would go out.

Mrs. Silver won the argument and left.

Silver later went out window, falling 15 feet. He died last night at St. Elizabeth's Hospital. Hillier said he was not in the apartment when Silver plunged.

A woman living at the apartment house told police Hillier was there six hours before he admitted he had been drinking. Mrs. Silver said she was at the home of a friend when her husband was injured. Police found no signs of a struggle in the apartment.

Hillier is a leather worker.

Local Elections in Free State Delayed

Dublin, Irish Free State, May 16 (AP)—A sensation was created in Dublin last night by a government decision postponing the local government elections until November.

In the meantime a bill will be pushed forward to extend the suffrage to all adults as in the election of the Dail Eireann. Under the existing law, only rate payers are eligible to vote in local government elections.

Reject Soviet Recognition

Montreal, May 16 (AP)—By almost unanimous vote the 27th general meeting of the Order of Railroad Telegraphers turned down a resolution for the recognition of Russia.

Oh, But Think of Emily Post!

Omaha, Neb., May 16 (AP)—Dr. C. O. Simpson says he laments the social decline of the toothpick.

Dr. Simpson, professor of radiodontia at Washington University, St. Louis, spoke at the Nebraska State Dental Society convention.

"Hardy pioneers," he said, "picked their teeth with bowie knives. The elite of the 80's carried folding gold toothpicks, and within the past 20 years toothpicks were quite generally served in homes and at public eating places.

"Now they are confined to primitive rural communities, restaurants and dining cars."

The proper manipulation of a toothpick, he said, can be extremely beneficial.

MAYOR SETTLES LYNN STRIKE

Mayor Manning of Lynn played the role of peacemaker today in a three-cornered fight among Local 20 of the Leather Workers' Union, the Goldman Shoe Co. and the Goniprow Kid Co. to end an eight-week strike and put 250 employes back to work.

Local 20 ousted William B. Mahan, national business agent, last week. Mahan retaliated by refusing to recognize Michael B. Corcoran as his successor. The local finally agreed to allow Mayor Manning to sign the agreement with the Goniprow Co. on their behalf.

FISH BOAT HELD AS RUM RUNNER

The Boston schooner Lark, which has had a picturesque career in the fisheries, was taken in charge by customs officers at a Gloucester wharf today after eight kegs of liquor had been found hidden beneath ice and fish in her hold. She was later sailed to Appraisers' Stores, where her crew of nine was questioned.

The Lark, known as the "Channel Express" because of her swift trips between Fish Pier and the channel grounds, discharged 100,000 pounds of fish at the Boston gateway and took 40,000 to Gloucester for spitting.

Her skipper, Capt. Ernest Parsons, was not aboard when Customs Inspectors Leon Varnum and Dennis F. Driscoll searched her. Officials said the schooner had not been seized, and that they suspected only a few crew members to be involved in the smuggling plot, unbeknown to the captain and owners. The Lark grounded on Cape Cod last year and 17 members of her crew were rescued by the coast guard. Later she was floated, slightly damaged.

RED CROSS ASKS AUBURN FIRE AID

Immediate contributions were asked by the Boston Metropolitan Chapter of the Red Cross today to take care of nearly 5000 families made homeless by the recent conflagrations in Ellsworth and Auburn, Me.

Contributions were asked to be sent to the Boston office, 347 Commonwealth ave. James Jackson, chairman of the Metropolitan Chapter, announced that every penny contributed would be used directly for relief, all expenses of the relief work being borne by the National Chapter.

Police Bring Back Chicago Suspects

Lieut. Thomas Connolly, of Boston police is in Chicago today to bring Joseph Hell, 23, and Daniel Leary, 24, back to this city to answer charges of obtaining money by means of a confidence game. The pair were arraigned on fugitive warrants in Chicago and waived extradition yesterday.

HITLER CALLS GENEVA AID TO DRAFT ARMS DEMAND

Berlin, May 16 (AP)—Chancellor Adolf Hitler today called Count Rudolf Nadolny to get the latest information from Geneva preparatory to facing the Reichstag and the world with a declaration of Germany's international political intentions.

After conferring with Nadolny, the Chancellor called on President von Hindenburg. Dr. Wilhelm Frick, minister of interior, accompanied him.

The Chancellor, at 3 p. m. tomorrow, will outline before the reassembled Reichstag Germany's position in the face of the deadlock in the world disarmament conference which followed German disagreement with articles of the British disarmament plan.

The situation in Germany was most tense, as government leaders sought to check the drift which rapidly was carrying the country into political isolation.

Newspapers generally blamed France for the Geneva impasse and expressed surprise that the Socialist Saturday night of Vice Chancellor Franz von Papen, in which he compared the present situation with that existing in 1914, had received a cool foreign reception.

The Wolff News Agency subsidiary, Deutsche Diplomatische Politische Korrespondenz, spoke of ceaseless French "sabotage" and blamed France for the crisis in the Geneva deliberations. The subsidiary usually reflects official opinion.

"Hitler wants no war," the Deutsche Allegemeine Zeitung declared in belittling talk of war.

London Reassured by Roosevelt and Duce

London, May 16 (INS)—Advices that President Franklin D. Roosevelt and Premier Mussolini will take a hand in baking Europe's political pie caused a marked easing of British apprehension over the German arms situation today.

Washington dispatches that President Roosevelt is preparing to make a plea for world preservation of peace and promising to throw the weight of American diplomacy against an aggressor nation were received with keen interest.

Similarly, reports that Mussolini has swung into action with peremptory demands that Hitler cool down have led to predictions that Hitler will rattle no sabres and make no threat of German rearmament. Instead, it is stated, he will press for fulfillment of German's arms equality status.

Although years of war are dying down, there is no disposition among officials here to conceal their fears regarding what effect Hitler's pronouncement may have on the world economic conference, particularly if it develops Germany finds herself unable to join in a disarmament accord.

London Parley Success Rests on Arms Deal

Washington, May 16 (AP)—Hopes mingled with fears today as Washington surveyed the prospects of success at the gathering of spokesmen from three score nations 25 days hence under the common roof of the London Economic Conference.

The best wishes of the peoples of the world as a whole will be directed that day toward a bright new building erected upon the outskirts of London in Kensington, the seat of the world meeting.

Recent events in Germany and the strong objections raised by the Hitler government to the British arms reduction proposal today held new potential sources of irritation which aroused apprehension lest they play havoc with the confidence by destroying the co-operative spirit considered necessary to real accomplishment.

President Roosevelt himself has taken the reins, prepared to speak out, as all the force and delicacy of American diplomacy are being tinged with a fervent, any irreparable breach at the Geneva arms conference on the eve of convening of the London parley.

DIFFICULTY RECOGNIZED

Until the arms crisis has been passed many officials here believe it will be impossible to predict accurately the chances for success at London.

Among those expected to be named on the American delegation the difficulties are clearly recognized, especially as now that views have been exchanged with more than a dozen nations, eight of which have been represented by special envoys invited by the President.

Here are some of the things the American delegation would like to see accomplished:

The moneys of the various nations stabilized at a definite ratio to each other or at least a beginning made toward such a step in order to end the fluctuations which make it difficult for men in one country to do business with men in another.

DEBTS IN BACKGROUND

A joint undertaking to refrain from raising new tariffs, quotas, embargoes, or creating other discriminations, thus pruning further the effort represented in the tariff truce for the sessions of the conference and the preliminary period which the United States has successfully advocated:

A definite plan for chopping away the incrustations of such obstacles which have accumulated during five or six years of steadily intensifying economic nationalism;

An increase in the price of silver and other basic commodities;

An agreement whereby the export of wheat would be limited to a figure which would no more than meet world needs, thereby avoiding huge surpluses which depress the price;

A resumption of the movement of capital to be brought about in part by abolition of foreign exchange restriction.

War debts have been definitely ruled off the program on the ground they concern only about 15 of the 66 nations invited to participate. Shadow will be seen over all the conference.

No U. S. Debt Holiday, Davis Tells France

Paris, May 16 (INS)—President Roosevelt does not intend to ask Congress for full authority in handling the foreign debt problem.

Neither will he propose a debt moratorium at this time.

Norman H. Davis, American Ambassador - at - Large, so informed Joseph Paul - Boncour, French premier, yesterday, Paul Boncour told the French cabinet today.

This information, decidedly discouraging to those still counting upon some debt concession from Washington, was briefly discussed, but no decision was reached.

It is still considered unlikely that France will meet the next debt installment, falling due in June, but will default as she did last December.

The cabinet council also discussed the disarmament situation. The prevailing opinion was that America would lend her moral aid to France—in a word, fixed fortifications—are no longer impregnable to the attack of war planes, heavy mobile artillery, and battleships called tanks, and poison gas.

"If all nations will agree wholly to eliminate from possession and use the weapons with which make possible a successful attack, defenses automatically will become impregnable and the frontiers and independence of every nation will become secure.

"The ultimate objective of the disarmament conference must be the complete elimination of all offensive weapons. The immediate objective is a substantial reduction of some of these weapons and the elimination of many others.

"This government believes that the program for immediate reduction of aggressive weapons, now under discussion at Geneva, is but a first step toward our ultimate goal.

"We do not believe that the proposed immediate steps go far enough. Nevertheless, this government welcomes the measures now proposed and will exert its influence toward the attainment of further successive steps of disarmament.

"Stated in the clearest way, there are three steps to be agreed upon in the present discussions:

"FIRST, to take, at once, the first definite step toward this objective, as broadly outlined in the MacDonald plan.

"SECOND, to agree upon time and procedure for taking the following steps.

"THIRD, to agree that while the first and the following steps are being taken, no nation shall increase its existing armaments over and above the limitations of treaty obligations.

"But the peace of the world must be assured during the whole period of disarmament and I, therefore, propose a fourth step concurrent with and wholly dependent on the faithful fulfillment of these three proposals and subject to existing treaty rights.

"That all the nations of the world should enter into a solemn and definite pact of non-aggression; that they should solemnly reaffirm the obligation they have assumed to limit and reduce their armaments, and, provided these obligations are faithfully executed by all signatory powers, individually agree that they will send no armed force of whatsoever nature across their frontiers.

"Common sense points out that if any strong nation refuses to join with genuine sincerity in these concerted efforts for political and economic peace, the one at Geneva and the other at London, progress can be obstructed and ultimately blocked. In such event the civilized world, seeking both forms of peace, will know where the responsibility for failure lies. I urge that no nation assume such a responsibility and that all the nations joined in these great conferences translate their professed policies into action. This is the way to political and economic peace.

"I trust that your government will join in the fulfillment of these hopes. (Signed)

"FRAKLIN D. ROOSEVELT."

Roosevelt's Plea to 54 Nations

Washington, May 16 (INS)—Fifty-four nations were invited today by President Roosevelt to join in a definite pact of non-aggression as a means to political and economic peace. They include the nations participating in the economic and disarmament conferences. They are:

Albania, Argentina, Austria, Belgium, Brazil, Columbia, Bolivia, Bulgaria, Chile, Costa Rica, China, Cuba, Czechoslovakia, Denmark, Dominican Republic, Ecuador, Egypt, Estonia, Ethiopia, Finland, France, Germany, Great Britain, including India and Ireland, Greece, Guatemala, Haiti, Hungary, Honduras, Iraq (Mesopotamia), Italy, Japan, Latvia, Lithuania, Duchy of Luxemburg, Mexico, The Netherlands, Nicaragua, Norway, Panama, Paraguay, Persia, Poland, Peru, Portugal, Rumania, Russia, Siam, Spain, Sweden, Switzerland, Turkey, Uruguay, Venezuela and Yugoslavia.

Text of Roosevelt's Appeal for Peace

Following is the text of the President's message:

"A profound hope of the people of my country impels me, as the head of their government, to address you and, through you, the people of your nation. This hope is that peace may be assured through practical measures of disarmament and that all of us may carry to victory our common struggle against economic chaos.

"To these ends the nations have called two great world conferences. The happiness, the prosperity, and the very lives of men, women and children who inhabit the whole world are bound up in the decisions which their governments will make in the near future. The improvement of social conditions, the preservation of individual human rights and the furtherance of social justice are dependent upon these decisions.

MUST AGREE QUICKLY

"The world economic conference will meet soon and must come to certain decisions quickly. The world cannot await deliberations long drawn out. The conference must establish order in place of the present chaos by a stabilization of currencies, by freeing trade from existing trade, and by international action to raise price levels. It must, in short, supplement the preliminary and wholly necessary domestic programs for economic recovery by wise and considered international action.

"The disarmament conference has labored for more than a year and, as yet, has been unable to reach satisfactory conclusions. Confused purposes still clash dangerously. Our duty lies in the direction of bringing practical results through concerted action based upon the greatest good, to the greatest number.

"Before the imperative call of this great duty, petty obstacles must be swept away and petty aims forgotten. A selfish victory is always destined to be an ultimate defeat. The furtherance of durable peace for our generation in every part of the world is the only goal worth of our best efforts.

"If we ask what are the reasons for armaments, which, in spite of the lessons and tragedies of the World War, are today a greater burden on the peoples of the earth than ever before, it becomes clear that they are twofold:

"First, the desire, disclosed or hidden, on the part of governments to enlarge their territories at the expense of a sister nation. I believe that only a small minority of governments or of peoples harbor such a purpose. Second, the fear of nations that they will be invaded. I believe that the overwhelming majority of peoples feel obliged to retain excessive armaments because they fear some act of aggression against them and not because they themselves seek to be aggressors.

IMPREGNABLE DEFENSE

"There is justification for this fear. Modern weapons of offense are vastly stronger than modern defense. Frontier forts, trenches, wire entanglements, coast defenses—in a word, fixed fortifications—are no longer impregnable to the attack of war planes, heavy mobile artillery, and battleships called tanks, and poison gas.

"If all nations will agree wholly to eliminate from possession and use the weapons with which make possible a successful attack, defenses automatically will become impregnable and the frontiers and independence of every nation will become secure.

"The ultimate objective of the disarmament conference must be the complete elimination of all offensive weapons. The immediate objective is a substantial reduction of some of these weapons and the elimination of many others.

"This government believes that the program for immediate reduction of aggressive weapons, now under discussion at Geneva, is but a first step toward our ultimate goal.

"We do not believe that the proposed immediate steps go far enough. Nevertheless, this government welcomes the measures now proposed and will exert its influence toward the attainment of further successive steps of disarmament.

"Stated in the clearest way, there are three steps to be agreed upon in the present discussions:

"FIRST, to take, at once, the first definite step toward this objective, as broadly outlined in the MacDonald plan.

"SECOND, to agree upon time and procedure for taking the following steps.

"THIRD, to agree that while the first and the following steps are being taken, no nation shall increase its existing armaments over and above the limitations of treaty obligations.

"But the peace of the world must be assured during the whole period of disarmament and I, therefore, propose a fourth step concurrent with and wholly dependent on the faithful fulfillment of these three proposals and subject to existing treaty rights.

"That all the nations of the world should enter into a solemn and definite pact of non-aggression; that they should solemnly reaffirm the obligation they have assumed to limit and reduce their armaments, and, provided these obligations are faithfully executed by all signatory powers, individually agree that they will send no armed force of whatsoever nature across their frontiers.

LLOYD GEORGE BACKS REICH

Rittsborough, Eng., May 16 (INS) Struggling for arms equality, Germany found a supporter in an unexpected quarter today as David Lloyd George, Britain's war-time prime minister, came to the defense of the Hitlerized Reich.

Defending the German claim, Lloyd George attacked Secretary for War Lord Hailsham for threatening sanctions against Germany if she proceeded to rearm.

Speaking as one of those who drafted the disarmament clause in the Versailles treaty, from which Germany has long striven to break away, he pointed out that the treaty provided for disarmament by the Allies when German armaments were destroyed.

"The nations which compelled Germany to sign the treaty, not only failed to carry out their pledge, but the majority of them—all in fact except ourselves—have increased their armaments," he declared.

ROOSEVELT IN WORLD PEACE PLEA

man policy, the message was a diplomatic sensation of first magnitude.

WHAT IT PROPOSES

IT PROPOSED that no armed troops whatsoever should hereafter cross any frontier save when a neighbor had offended by breaking her armament agreements.

IT BACKED the MacDonald proposal for a consultative pact for security, which the United States heretofore had shunned and which France much desires, but it also proposed that all nations hold armament within treaty limits, which France has been accused of failing to do.

IT MENTIONED no names, but denounced foreign invasion at a time when the Japanese advance in China is in full swing.

IT LAID DOWN the doctrine of non-invasion so broadly as to preclude by implication further United States marine incursions into Latin-America.

IT ASKED SPECIFICALLY for success of the Geneva arms conference and the London economic conference, and proposed a later conference to carry further the work begun there.

A copy of the message was prepared for submission to Congress, for its information, and administration congressional leaders at once hailed it as an epochal step of leadership for peace.

The message, contrary to long-standing diplomatic practice, was addressed directly to the kings, potentates, and presidents of all of the forty four nations to be represented at London, including Russia. It was signed just "Franklin D. Roosevelt."

It went forward early today in direct language, without the usual protection of diplomatic code.

Within a space of a few hours it would be before the head of every great nation around the globe, and most of the smaller ones.

SURPRISES DIPLOMATS.

Officials here indicated they did not consider inclusion of Russia among the recipients as in any sense a gesture of Russian recognition. Although this was the first direct diplomatic message to pass for years between Washington and the Russian ruling regime, it was described as merely representing a conviction that such a step as the President proposed could not succeed unless it had universal acceptance.

Mr. Roosevelt's bold bid for a new world order surprised even some of the diplomats who have been directly associated with the conversations in progress here preliminary to the London conference. They expected him to take leadership once the London conference had begun but his direct manner of striking at the obstacles developing beforehand was a complete surprise.

SETS U. S. POLICY

The American government is fully aware that the sweeping words of the President's declaration will be interpreted to apply to this nation's own foreign policy.

The proposal that no armed forces whatsoever be sent across a frontier, except where arms limitation agreements have been violated, stirred particular discussion here. Before the message was dispatched this whole subject was fully debated among state department officials and others.

The United States now has marines in one Latin-American country—Haiti. A date has been set for their withdrawal. They have no permanent status there. And their re-entry would appear to constitute a direct crossing of the frontier by armed troops.

CHINESE SITUATION

There are soldiers and marines also in China, but on a different basis. Their presence there is defined by long-existing treaty. It was indicated in official quarters today that they would not therefore fall within the prohibition suggested by Mr. Roosevelt, except in one sense. A question would arise if these American units undertook to enlarge in any way the territory they hold, as the Japanese forces stationed by treaty in Manchuria did at the beginning of the present Sino-Japanese warfare.

No official would enlarge immediately on the effect here of the proposal to do away with offensive weapons of warfare. The tentative plans of the American navy provide for construction of more eight-inch cruisers, and that type of ship has been regarded by some naval experts as essentially a weapon of offense. But the point is disputed.

Time and again I am told——by my own organization and by others——that I penalize myself by quality.

Friendly critics protest our putting into the Ford V-8 what they call "twenty-year steel." They say such quality is not necessary; the public does not expect it; and that the public does not know the difference anyway.

But I know the difference.

I know that the car a man sees is not the car he drives——he drives the car which the engineer sees. The car which is seen, comprises beauty of design, color and attractive accessories,——all desirable, of course. The best evidence that we think so is that they are all found on the Ford V-8.

But these are not the car. The car proper, which is the basis of all the rest, is the type of engine and its reliability; the structure of chassis and body, ruggedly durable; the long thought and experiment given to safety factors; the steady development of comfort, convenience and economy. These make the car.

A car can be built that will last two or three years. But we have never built one. We want the basic material of our car to be as dependable the day it is discarded as the day it is bought. Ford cars built 15 years ago are still on the road. It costs more to build a durable car——but two items we do not skimp are cost and conscience. A great many things could "get by"——the public would never know the difference. But we would know.

The new Ford V-8 is a car that I endorse without any hesitancy. I know what is in it. I trust our whole thirty years' reputation with it. It is even better than our previous V-8. It is larger, more rugged and mechanically a better job all round.

I readily say this in an advertisement because I know the car will back it up.

KEENAN BARES DEATH THREAT IN HIS TRIAL

Wilfred B. Keenan, Boston lawyer, who is facing disbarment proceedings in Supreme Court before Judge Charles H. Donahue, declared today that he was threatened with death in a telephone call to his wife last night.

He said that while he was working at his office last night he called his wife at 11 p. m. and she told him a man had called his home at 8 May st., Jamaica Plain, and asked if "Keenan was there."

When told by Mrs. Keenan that he husband was not at home the man said, "Well the dirty —— had better not be there or we'll get him tonight! If we don't get him tonight we'll get him tomorrow night."

According to Keenan, his wife advised him to be careful and get police to accompany him home as she had observed a man loitering near the house. Keenan said he reported the matter to the police but went home alone in his automobile, driving up and down in front of the house a few times before entering. He said he did not observe any one.

3 JURORS FOR $150"

Mayer Kettleman, disbarred Revere lawyer, government witness, resumed the stand today under cross-examination of George Alpert, counsel for Keenan.

Kettleman testified he old Special Commissioner Dunbar F. Carpenter that he told Atty. Keenan after the Thorner case the three purors he had "fixed" would squawk if they did not get the full $50 each promised. Yesterday Kettleman declared that jurors were "bought" for as little as $25.

Kettleman said that when he went to New York last March, between appearances before the special commissioner, and registered at a New York hotel under the name "Charles Adams," no one sent him there and he was not trying to conceal anything.

He said it probably was the first time he had ever registered at a hotel under a fictitious name.

"I DIDN'T BLOW SAFE"

The following cross-examination then followed:

Q—Your part in fixing jurors was rather expensive, wasn't it? A—No, I wouldn't say that.

Q—You worked for other lawyers, didn't you? A—Yes.

Q—For able lawyers? A—Yes.

Q—Good trial lawyers? A—Well, I thought they were.

Q—Were other people fixing lawyers? A—Yes.

Q—Were court officers? A—I had no dealings with them.

Q.—Did you have anything to do with the blowing of a safe in Keenan's office about March 17? A—No.

Q.—Did you know anything about it? A.—Yes. Keenan told me about it.

CHARGES BLACKMAIL

Q.—Did Max Moskow tell you to see Harold F. Hathaway?

Judge Donahue—It is not necessary to do that; it is easy to bring a lot of names in here but the court is not interested.

Atty. Alpert—I want to show that this man Kettleman attempted to blackmail Mr. Hahaway, and that he talked to Atty. Keenan about it and that he told Atty. Keenan that if Hathaway did not come through he was going to tell the commissioner about him. This man Kettleman's sole purpose was blackmail and telling all his false testimony.

Judge Donahue—There is no evidence any any blackmail of Mr. Keenan in this case as yet. We must finish the case by Friday night.

Atty. Alpert dropped the subject.

WAR SURVEY OF PARIS PLANTS

Paris, May 16 (AP)—As a national defense measure Paris factories were ordered today to report to the "Passive Defense Bureau" within a month on the number of their employes and on their capacity.

This move came as the nation was waiting for Chancellor Hitler's important pronouncement before the German Reichstag tomorrow on the German policy in regard to re-armament.

The order to the factories applied to all establishments employing more than 500 workers, and to metal, wood, food, chemical, clothing and banking concerns, as well as army supply plans.

JORDAN'S CLUB ADDS 20

The annual banquet of the Jordan Marsh Half and Quarter Century Clubs was held last night in the grill room of the company.

Three hundred and twenty-seven members and their families were present to initiate 20 new members to the Quarter Century Club and one new member to the Half Century Club.

Those completing 25 years of service during 1932 were Henry S. Wright, Mary E. Sexton, Frank B. Wetherbee, Annie F. Lynch, Martin J. Gately, Peter Haglund, Waldo F. Sutcliffe, Ambrose T. Leslie, Julia N. Stout, Mary T. Cunningham, Anna R. Martin, Helen M. Murnane, George I. Blair, Frederick C. Stearns, George L. Manning, John D. Riley, Catherine E. Cormley, Henry B. Gates, Benjamin F. Samson, Jr., Michael Barry.

The Half Century Club welcomed Miss Annie L. Brine, who on December 20, 1932, completed 50 years of service.

Burnelle O. Hawkins, store manager and director, was toastmaster. Mr. Mitton commented on the apparent turn in general business conditions and pointed out the distinct encouragement given by the recent trend of business.

Those at the head table were C. W. Mitton, Richard Mitton, Robert Mitton, W. S. Tufts and C. S. Thompson, H. F. Twomey, B. O. Hawkins, W. A. Everett, Miss Annie L. Brine, T. F. Giblin, W. J. Corbett and Neal O'Hara, guest speaker.

FARLEY DINNER STIRS CAPITAL

New York, May 16—The New York Daily News in a dispatch from its Washington bureau today says:

Political Washington got a big kick out of that Saturday night testimonial dinner in New York City wherein 3500 satraps of Democracy assembled to sing the praises of Patronage General James A. Farley.

"The failure of Al Smith to have any part in the doings naturally contributed the choicest morsel for political tongues to daily with. Mayor James M. Curley's lead-off position on the oratorical squad while Manhattan's own mayor, John P. O'Brien, was left speechless, finished another bit of gossip.

"You can imagine Jimmy Walker sitting idly by and permitting a mayor from Boston to come in and steal such a show," more than one Democrat observed.

"But picture the great Louisiana Kingfish—Huey P. Long—in New York arrayed in all his spring finery but on the outside looking in while the princes of the New Deal were breaking bread with President Roosevelt's head dispenser of patronage."

PREMIERE

Thrilling Romance of Hollywood Today

By ROBERT TERRY SHANNON

WHAT HAS GONE BEFORE

At the premiere of her latest motion picture, Leni Luneska, beautiful star, is stunned by the appearance of her jailbird husband, whom she married in Vienna when only 14. He insists upon recognition as her husband and wants in a private office of the theater for her to reconsider her refusal. Lucky Cavanaugh, handsome gambler, who fell in love with Leni on sight that evening, tries to make Kruger leave. Kruger empties his gun at Cavanaugh without effect, then rushes into the next office in a rage. He surprises burglars looting a safe and is shot dead. Cavanaugh slips out unnoticed, but meets Detective Tom Mulrooney in the hall. Later as Leni and Cavanaugh are about to leave the theater to avoid questioning, Mulrooney stops them. Cavanaugh tells a careful story.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

"Baybe the lady would like to tell the truth," suggested Mulrooney.

Leni looked straight at Cavanaugh as though he—instead of Mulrooney—had her fate in keeping.

"I will stand by whatever Mr. Cavanaugh says," she declared.

An instinct to protect her ran like a warm current through his whole body. Slowly the dark idea was forming in his mind that it would be necessary for him to take the whole burden of everything upon his shoulders in order to exculpate Leni completely. Yet a sane man would willingly assume the responsibility for a murder.

"Don't say a word," he heard himself crying to Leni. It was exactly as though another person had spoken the words.

Lucky was beginning to feel easier now. The theory sounded perfectly plausible, and Mulrooney seemed in the mood to swallow it entirely. The clear blue eyes of the detective were as unsuspecting as a child's.

"I'll admit that you've explained your position with the case very well," said Mulrooney in his slow, contented voice. "There's only one or two things, yet that I don't understand Cavanaugh . . . Why are you and Miss Luneska lying to me? I'm a little hurt because you think I'm so dumb. Right after we found the body and discovered the robbery, I naturally talked to Kaufmann, the manager of this theatre. He identified the dead man as the fellow that you, Cavanaugh, and himself brought up to this office—a bird that wanted to talk to Miss Luneska. Kaufmann said something about blackmail. If you're going to lie to me, Cavanaugh, why don't you rig up something that's worth while? Isn't it the truth that Miss Luneska sent you back here to settle with that dead man—and you did settle with him?"

Leni Luneska sat stark still and white in her chair. She was as motionless as though her heart had stopped beating. Her white bosom was still and breathless.

SICKISH FEELING

A sickish feeling developed in the region of Cavanaugh's solar plexus and spread through his entire body. His deeper self was shocked with astonishment that his cool mechanical brain had betrayed him. In the past he had been justified in setting a high value on his own mental adroitness, but something new—something unaccountably mysterious had stolen in upon him and conflicted with his powers of thought.

A subtle mental parasite had gotten into him and drugged his intelligence.

He could hear his thoughts talking silently. They were saying:

"I've ruined everything. I am an idiot. Undoubtedly I will be arrested and tried. Instead of covering up everything for Leni I've ruined her. How on earth could I have forgotten that Kaufmann would naturally tell his story about Kruger?"

"I've always considered you one of the smartest chaps I know," Mulrooney was saying to him. "Only a moron would try to get away with that story you told me. What happened to you, anyway, Cavanaugh? Did this woman—I mean Miss Luneska—get you hallied up?"

Cavanaugh did not answer him immediately, but Mulrooney's last question swept through him like a cold air, clearing away a fog. It was the truth.

The effect of Leni Luneska upon his senses had added him, had set in motion the unguessed powers of emotion that had overwhelmed his common sense—yet how completely—yet how secretly—the strange force was at work within him.

ODDS AGAINST HIM

He was as stunned as every man is who comes upon the realization that some particular woman has wrecked all his native shrewdness. He had no resentment against Leni. Indeed, he felt an actual flood of remorse for what he had let her in for. His face was burning with the shame of a man who understands he has bungled completely.

"Did you kill that man?" Mulrooney asked him abruptly.

"I did not," Cavanaugh returned. To his own ears the words had a hollow sound.

"Well, maybe you didn't," Mulrooney said. "I can tell you this, though—if you don't come clean before a jury, the odds are 10 to one against you."

Cavanaugh was fully aware that his situation was desperate.

Mulrooney's words rang with truth. If he ever went before a jury the odds against him would easily be 10 to one. It made it clearer to him to state the odds in opposing terms. The circumstances against Leni Luneska was infinitely greater—a hundred to one that she would be dragged through the mud of exposure.

The only thing that stood between the both of them in calamity was the inadequate organ called a brain between Lucky Cavanaugh's throbbing temples.

"The simplest thing to do," Mulrooney said easily, "is for both of you people to tell the truth. It would be a novelty that would save us all a lot of trouble."

"You wouldn't believe the truth," Cavanaugh said.

"I might," said Mulrooney, "You're supposed to be a gambler. Why don't you take a chance and come clean?"

In all of his experience Lucky Cavanaugh had never before been driven into a corner. It was a stifling sensation. The truth, possibly, might get him out of trouble, but it would blast Leni Luneska.

In the past he had always put himself first with a frank, good-natured selfishness. But now he was thinking about somebody else—about a woman. But not exactly thinking. He was feeling.

The only thing that could save him was his instinct and intuition—that blind streak of fate and fortune that had given him the name of Lucky. That such a force operated in the affairs of men he had not the slightest doubt. His luck had operated on a thousand different occasions—he lived by it. He was immune from the misfortune and disappointment of other men. Wherever he went he rode on a golden tide . . .

A patient hand was raised in the air by Mulrooney as though he were a crossing policeman halting traffic. It was a square-palmed hand with stubby fingers and fine reddish hairs on the back.

"Now, folks—you're just wasting time for everybody," he said almost pleadingly. "This stalling ain't getting you nowhere at all. Myself, I'd like to finish up and get home. If you think it's any fun for me to stay up all night arguing, you're crazy. I'm a family man. Got a wife and four kids. The missus was complaining the other day that I'm practically a stranger in my own home. Of course, I can sit up all night questioning you if you insist, but I don't mind telling you it cuts into my rest something fierce. I gotta be on duty at 8 o'clock in the morning while people like you two slep till noon if you like."

Cavanaugh had always prided himself as a judge of character but he was unable to tell whether Mulrooney was kidding him or not. The professional manner of a detective had faded from the man entirely and left him as human and ordinary as a corner grocerymaan.

"I am tired—I would like to go home," said Leni from her tight-b-string throat, "Can't we talk this over tomorrow?"

Cavanaugh clutched quickly at the straw. "How about it, Mulrooney?"

"So you'd both get together and hatch out some new story for me to start untangling again," the other said wearily. "I'd rather wind everything up right now—that's the sensible way."

The eyes of the detective behind their blandness were pools of lurking schrewdness. The clear blue light concentrated fully upon Cavanaugh's face.

"I'll ask you plain questions, Cavanaugh, and I want plain answers. Did you kill that man?"

"No!"

"But you talked to him this evening, didn't you?"

Pretzels Come Into Their Own Again

A famous biscuit company tells me that the demand for pretzels has increased tremendously since the advent of beer. Two huge bakeries, each devoted exclusively to pretzels, have increased their workers and are on a 24-hour daily production basis—one is producing approximately 8,000,000 pretzels a day and the other 4,000,000—and back of the baking of every one of these delicious, salty, twisted crisp crackers is an interesting story.

The "bending" and baking of pretzels is an ancient handicraft that grew up in central Europe in the dark ages and was brought to this country by early Dutch and German settlers. It is their descendants that make up the present ranks of pretzel benders.

The recipes for pretzels are substantially the ones handed from mother to daughter through many generations of Dutch and German Americans. Modern bakery methods have been introduced.

The dough is mixed scientifically to insure a uniform product and the actual baking is done under exact time and temperature controls. But the actual shaping or "bending" of the old style remains a handicraft.

The dough reaches the girls in a thin roll, about the length and width of a lead pencil. One end is taken in each hand and a double twist brings the two ends together and completes the looped design. Like the movement of a magician's hands, the operation is so rapid the eye cannot follow it, and the daily output of the girl bakers runs into the housands.

We didn't have to wait for beer to acquire our love for pretzels, however. We like them with soups, salads, ice creams and all kinds of cold beverages—not to forget their appropriateness with cocktails, either tomato juice, clam or otherwise.

Pretzels have received the blessing of the medical profession and dieticians, too, and so have found their way to the school lunch counter. They're a concentrated food, rich in protein calcium, phosphate and other essential elements for bone, teeth and body building. Their crispness exercises the teeth, inducing mastication, and they are easily digested.

MUFFINS ALWAYS WELCOMED AT MEALS

SIFT DRY INGREDIENTS — ADD RAISINS AND ALL-BRAN — COMBINE THE TWO MIXTURES — DROP IN GREASED MUFFIN PANS

Like muffins? Foolish question. Everybody likes 'em. There's not a family in captivity that ever had enough . . . most especially bran muffins, these brown bits of goodness that bring so much extra nourishment to hasty breakfasts.

I have eaten bran muffins so dry that they flew out of your ears when you swallowed, and then again—I'm thinking of a woman's club up on Beacon st.—I found them so deliciously moist and tender I've fallen from the diet grace into the temptation of "seconds."

Here's the secret of the darkly delicious kind of bran muffin that's not only good eating, but mighty good for us.

Mix and sift together ½ cup flour, ½ tsp. salt, ½ tsp. soda and 1 tsp. baking powder. Then add ½ cup seedless raisins and 1 cup of whole bran. Beat 1 egg well and add ½ cup buttermilk, and 2 tbsp. molasses. Combine mixtures, beat well, add 1 tbsp. melted butter. Drop in hot well-greased muffin pans and bake at 350 deg. F. for about 25 minutes.

Ready Money for Boy and Girl Organizations

It is not every day that the boys and girls of Boston are given an easy way of raising money for their favorite organizations.

Yet this is just what a well-known soup company is making possible. In a novel plan that is meeting with an enthusiastic response, this firm has agreed to redeem every label from its tomato soup for one-half cent, payable directly to the boy or girl organization which presents the labels for redemption.

Now this tomato soup is so well known and popular that it is served in practically every home. This makes it easy for the boys and girls to collect the labels and hand them over to their group leaders. These leaders then turn them over to the soup company and obtain actual cash at the rate of half a cent a label.

In these days of tight money, the boys and girls have nothing but cheers for such a plan and they are digging in on a systematic campaign on all fronts to realize ready money for their various projects.

"Why, it's just like finding money in the street," said one boy yesterday. He is a group leader, and he has his cohorts lining up their parents and friends to garner in the precious labels.

"It certainly was fine for the Campbell Soup Co. to give us this chance. And we are cashing in on it fast. All you have to do is to ask your friends and neighbors to save those labels, for they're using the soup all the time. Every organization has some special need for cash right now, and this is a real, practical way to get it."

The offer, which was announced last week in the advertising columns of the Boston Evening American, attracted immediate and widespread notice in boy and girl club circles.

The following organizations in Boston are already eligible to take advantage of this plan, and others are rapidly adding their names to the list: Boston Council Boy Scouts, Boston Council Girl Scouts, Y. M. C. A., Huntington ave. branch, Dorchester branch and Hyde Park branch; Children of Mary, Gate of Heaven Parish school, Cathedral school, Elizabeth Peabody House, Campfire Girls, St. Francis DeSales Fife, Drum and Bugle Corps, St. Joseph's school, West End Boys, Dorchester Robbins, Dorchester Settlement House, Salvation Army, Life Saving Scouts and Guards, Juvenile Class of Phyllis Wheatley Elks, North End school, and St. Rose's school.

Malden to Sell Own Bonds

For the first time in its history, Malden has a bond salesman in its employ. He was appointed to that position by Mayor John D. Devir and starts work today.

Thomas F. Holland is the special appointee and he will assist the city treasurer, Walter E. Milliken, as an outside man. He will attempt to collect taxes due the city, secure payment of taxes in advance from people able to so pay and to sell city of Malden notes and bonds "over the counter" to residents.

Do YOU— who never TRUSTED HASH

Read and rejoice taste PRUDENCE and be thrilled

BACK in your mind there's a vague idea that under certain rare circumstances hash can be a glorious dish, but somehow you don't trust it, as a rule; fear it's made of scraps; sort of thrown together anyhow.

Well then, here is how Prudence Corned Beef Hash is made, by an old New England recipe in a spotless New England kitchen. Only young, tender beef is used; an exact proportion of lean and fat meat; no scraps, no skin, no gristle.

After the meat is boiled and cooled, it is removed from the pot and the fat skimmed off the water. Then, in this same savory water, carefully selected white, mealy potatoes are boiled. Mighty few housewives today would take such trouble; not to speak of a big meat factory.

Prudence Hash is a delicious, wholesome, hearty meal; it's hash that is hash; a dish fit for a king.

It is all ready to heat and eat. Just open the can and brown the hash in a frying pan for three minutes. And, Prudence is a true economy; costs six cents for a man's-size serving.

You'll find it hard to keep Prudence Corned Beef Hash in the house for an emergency—once you serve it, your entire family will want it frequently. But, Prudence is easy to buy—at just about every good grocery store.

If you really want to get over your distrust of hash, make sure that it's Prudence you buy.

FIGHT EXPECTED IN CONGRESS ON NEW TAX

Washington, May 16 (AP)—A stormy fight in Congress over new taxes to finance the government's $3,300,000,000 public building program was indicated today.

Powerful opposition already massed against proposals for a general sales tax led to the belief that such a levy would meet with almost certain defeat.

President Roosevelt will send up his message on public works-industrial control tomorrow. He will suggest several methods of taxation, but he will not recommend any particular one.

After a White House conference yesterday, one Democratic leader said:

"The House will not pass a sales tax and from the attitude taken by leaders of the ways and means committee, there is little likelihood that the committee will recommend such a levy."

The House decisively rejected the sales tax two years ago.

The committee of Congressional and industrial chieftains which drafted the measure, suggested a "re-employment tax" of one to two per cent on all sales of industry.

Some of the alternative taxes which are to be advanced include an increase in the present one-cent federal gasoline tax; a sales levy on coffee, tea, spices, bananas, pepper and salt; a tax on stock dividends; and a reduction in the income tax exemptions from the present $2500 allowed married and the $1000 allowed single persons.

TARIFF TRUCE HITS NEW SNAG

Paris, May 16 (INS)—The American proposal for a tariff truce, accepted by the organizing committee of the World Economic Conference representing eight nations, met a new obstacle today.

Following an hour's conference between Norman H Davis and Finance Minister Bonnet regarding the truce, it was learned the French reservations to it are so sweeping as virtually to nullify it.

This was revealed by members of the floating American embassy headed by Davis as he came away from his conference with Bonnet frankly discouraged.

It was learned that Bonnet informed Davis France has other tariff measures in process of enactment and will proceed with these under her third reservation to the truce.

Business Turn Seen as Big Aid in Relief Fund Drive

The upward trend in business conditions is apparent in the willingness shown by many business concerns, which failed to contribute to the initial Boston Emergency Relief Campaign, to help as much as possible in the renewed drive.

Campaign leaders announced personal firm contributions are being made by those which did not donate to the opening drive. In addition arrangements are being made for a canvass of employes by those concerns which had neglected to do this before.

The total campaign contribution to date, according to an announcement from the drive headquarters, now stands at $3,600,000. This amount includes the donations which have been received since the drive was suspended last March because of the nationwide bank holiday.

The industry and finance committee is securing many new canvassers to contact those firms which did not donate in the early campaign and their reports for the opening day are said by officials to be most encouraging. B. Loring Young is head of this committee.

The trades group of the wards committee has resumed its activities in arranging for speakers to address employes at the smaller factories in the outlying wards of the city. Harry Caldwell is in charge of a special group arranging for such meetings and has already completed plans for meetings at two plants in Charlestown.

Twins' Mother Asks $50,000 of Doctor

Suit for $50,000 for an alleged erroneous diagnosis was brought in Federal court today by Mrs. Mildred F. Pierce of New York against Dr. Daniel F. Jones, Commonwealth ave., specialist.

Mrs. Pierce charges that in July, 1930, Dr. Jones ordered her to the hospital to be operated on for a tumor. When he made an incision, she charges, he found that what he thought was a tumor was twins. One of the twins, born in November, 1930, died.

Mrs. Pierce also charges that Dr. Jones, without authority, removed her appendix. Dr. Jones made a denial of all charges.

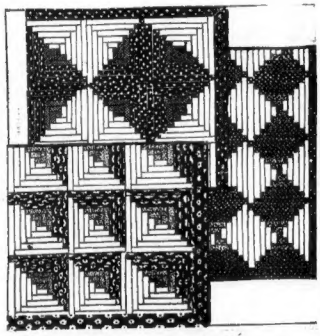
LOG CABIN QUILTS

By LAURA WHEELER



Pattern No. 440

THE PATCHWORK quilt is not alone a distinctly American product, but in it the early history of our country has been recorded. Log Cabin—Lincoln—Pioneer Days—a hardy people fighting against great odds to settle a continent, and carrying with them the culture and the art of home-making, that they had known in their homes in the East r in far off Europe. That is what the name of Log Cabin patterns calls to mind. As a piece of needlework, it is one of the most popular of the quilt patterns, its patches or "logs" being easily formed into a block. Possibly its popularity is also due to the fact that it can be made of scraps of material without being any of its beauty. The blcks lend themselves to a variety of most effective arrangements, of which three alternatives are suggested, as illustrated.

The pattern comes to you with complete simple instructions for cutting, sewing and finishing, together with yardage chart, diagram of quilt to help arrange the blocks for single and double bed size, and a diagram of block which serves as a guide for placing the patches and suggests contrasting materials.

Send 10c, for a pattern for this design to Boston Evening American, Needlework Dept., 32 Eighth ave., New York city.

DIVIDEND FOR HEARST STOCK

San Francisco, May 16—The board of directors of Hearst Consolidated Publications, Inc., yesterday declared the 12th consecutive quarterly cash dividend of 1¾ per cent, or at the rate of 7 per cent annually on the Class "A" cumulative preferred shares. The dividend is payable June 15 to shareholders of record May 31.

The annual meeting was also held today, at which all officers and members of the board of directors were re-elected for the ensuing year. Officers and directors of Hearst Consolidated Publications, Inc., include:

William Randolph Hearst, president; John Francis Neylan, first vice-president; William W. Murray, second vice-president; Charles Mayer, secretary; Clarence R. Lindner, treasurer; William Randolph Hearst, Jr., Grove J. Fink, Richard A. Carrington, Jr., Edward H. Clark, D. E. Town, and Robert P. Holliday.

The properties of Hearst Consolidated Publications, Inc., were reported in a sound condition and that in recent weeks there has been a sharp increase in advertising and circulation. Since the termination of the national banking holiday some of the newspapers in this group have carried the largest number of advertising columns in recent years and others report the biggest amount since last year.

With the nationwide diversification of its publishing enterprises, Hearst Consolidated reflects a cross-picture of improved trade conditions in many general lines of business thoroughout the country.

The Detroit Times reports the largest circulation of any newspaper in the state of Michigan, while the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph now has the biggest Sunday city circulation of any newspaper in that city. Likewise, other Hearst Consolidated properties report substantial gains in advertising and circulation.

WYOMING 9 TO 1 FOR REPEAL

Cheyenne, Wyo., May 16 (INS)—Returns from about half the state indicated today that Wyoming voters favored repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment by a majority of nine to one.

Returns showed 334 delegates favoring repeal and 40 favoring retention had been selected to attend county conventions on May 18. The county conventions will choose delegates to the state convention to be held at Casper on May 25.

Trenton, N. J., May 16 (INS)—Citizens of New Jersey trooped to the polls today to vote on repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment. All indications pointed to an overwhelming protest against the prohibition law.

SHOCKS FELT IN SAN FRANCISCO

San Francisco, May 16 (AP)—Two sharp earthquakes awakened residents throughout the San Francisco Bay area at 3:45 a. m. today.

Street lights went out in Santa Rosa, 50 miles north of here, when the shocks disrupted the electric system. A few clocks were stopped and windows broken in San Francisco. No other damage was reported.

The shocks, each of several seconds duration, came in quick succession. The second, by far the stronger, awakened sleepers, rattled windows, and shook furniture.

Gold Hoarders Turn to Window Leaf Now

Medford has a new kind of thief who steals gold leaf from the gold lettering on store windows. The Hillside Food Shoppe at 289 Boston avenue has reported to police that gold lettering valued at $25 was stolen off the window during the night. Police do not know whether it was taken by some gold hoarder or just by some mean thief.

Police to Practice

ALL WAITING TO TELL THEIR STORY OF LOW WAGES

Lowell factory workers, many of them striking against conditions prevailing in the workshops today, are shown as they gathered in the Lowell Civic Auditorium to bare their stories of conditions in the factories. Here they are, men and women workers repeating their stories of low wages and hard work, that caused them to strike. (Boston American Photo.)

Mansfield Praises Shop Expose

As long as starvation wages under sweat shop conditions exist, there can be no prosperity for America.

This is the opinion of Frederick W. Mansfield, former president of the Massachusetts Bar Association, and counsel for Lowell shoe strikers.

FREDERICK W. MANSFIELD

Endorsing the campaign of the Boston Evening American and Sunday Advertiser against sweatshops and sweatshop exploitation of labor, Mansfield maintained that "the workers must receive a fair wage—enough to supply the necessities of life and for something left over because it is the spending of this surplus that provides more enjoyment for them and prosperity for others." He said:

"The only way that this country can recover from depression is by inducing the people to become buyers again. And the only way that they can become buyers is by enabling them to get money with which to buy.

This never can be accomplished by drastic wage reductions or by curtailing the opportunity to work.

"Putting people to work at a decent wage and under decent conditions is the only way that prosperity may be brought back. Starvation wages under sweatshop conditions will never accomplish it. By elimination of waste and graft in government necessary economies may be effected and the burden on the taxpayer lightened without resorting to wholesale reductions in wages, in public employment.

Smith College Prober Flays Sweatshop Evil

In support of the drive of the Boston Evening American and the Sunday Advertiser against Massachusetts sweatshops, Dr. Dorothy Wolfe Douglas of the economic department of Smith College denounced the sweatshops as "catch-alls" and "parasites on legitimate industry."

A prominent figure in the recent strike of the Northampton mill of the College Weavers, Inc., Dr. Douglas came to know the workers and their stories of poor existence on low wages.

As an expert of economics, she says the cost of sweatshops to industry is "enormous, incalculable."

"Sweatshops are parasites on legitimate industry," she stated. "Insidiously they drag down to their own level industries that are striving to adhere to labor standards legislated for the protection of workers.

"These sweatshops are 'catch-alls' for the people. They are getting skilled labor at sweatshop wages. They are getting quality work at sweatshop prices. They are extremely bad for the community since they undermine the welfare and morale of the people working in them. The sweatshops cut down the power of citizens as consumers.

"While property owners continue to lose their homes, taxpayers continue to pay, in every way, for the continued life of sweatshops.

"With industry as it is today, undermined by sweatshops, there is no bottom or form, or social assurance to keep people from working for practically nothing. People laid off in mills, seek temporary refuge for income in sweatshop factories. From every standpoint we find that the sweatshop represents not only a bad situation to the country's rehabilitated industry, but a serious one. Unfair competition, resulting from the mushroom uprising of sweatshops, has placed legitimate industry in a precarious level.

"In England there are trade unions serving a double purpose, which keep the workers, under strong protective legislation, from working for a pittance and from being willing to work for sweatshop wages.

"Sweatshops represent an enormous cost, for they do business in a fly-by-night way. There is the story about the dog with rabies that bit a skunk. In order to get the one afflicted skunk the community ordered that every skunk be killed. The comparison is obvious. If we permit the sweatshops to continue, legitimate industry will eventually become so contaminated that a similar process will have to ensue.

"The whole thing is preposterous."

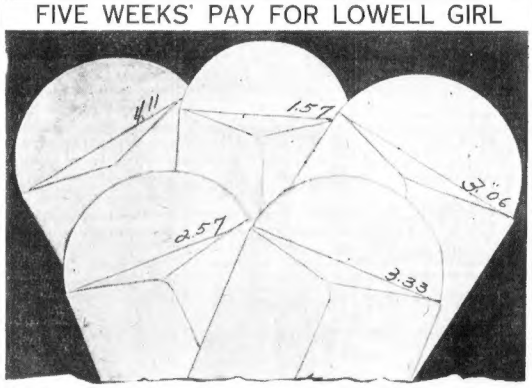
FIVE WEEKS' PAY FOR LOWELL GIRL



The evils of the Massachusetts SWEATSHOPS are many. They are being thoroughly investigated. Poor working surroundings—lack of good, fresh air—long hours for little pay, all must be halted by some strong force within our state. Here you see a mighty, yes, startling, exhibit of five pay envelopes—received in five consecutive weeks—by a Lowell girl worker. You can see the figures yourself received as pay-salary—call it what you will—passed on pay day to girl for hard grueling work in a mill. How would you like to work a week for $4.11—$1.57—$3.06—$2.57 or $3.33?

WORKERS LIVE ON CORN MEAL

only three days when she discovered that her total income for that time amounted to only $1.05. She repaired shoes at 35 cents a case. Going from there to the Lowell Shoe Co., she remained six weeks before joining the strikers' ranks. Her first pay she gave as $3.84 and those of successive weeks as $3.76; $3.25; $1.91; $2.40 and $1.76.

"I have two children and a husband who works part-time. We couldn't have lived last winter unless I went to work. We're so in debt that it will take a long, long time before I am able to pay back what I owe."

Josephine, who worked for a year and a half at the Becker plant, handled 400 pieces or so in her work as match marker. She received 10 cents a case for her job. Sometimes her weekly earnings netted between $2 and $3. At other times, "when I worked a full week, every minute," she made $6 and $7 a week.

Once she made 42 cents as a bench worker on a full week's schedule. And in addition, took her turn at cleaning out the room in which she and the other girls in the factory used to wash their hands.

Felt "Like a Queen" on $3 Weekly Pay

On standard pay, in the stock fitting room, casing up inner soles, and marking sizes, Jane received $7.50 from the Becker Brothers firm.

"I made about $3 a week at the Phyllis Shoe Co. dressing shoes," Blanche revealed.

Her last pay envelope from this factory was $2.30. Other pay she received were 88 cents, $1.23, $2.00, and $1.56.

When she made $3 one week she felt "like a queen," she told.

Although she planned to stay in industry if her job turned out well, Panagiota Costopulous, 16, of 121 Lexington st., Lowell, decided differently when she worked a whole day at the Becker plant and made eight cents. After spending nine weeks at the factory during the summer months from seven to five in the afternoon making $2.32 as top notch salary for any one week, she returned to school work.

Today she is a sophomore at the Lowell high school, planning some day to be somebody's bookkeeper at a living wage.

"I made eight cents one day and it cost me 20 cents for carfare," she said. "I had no intention of returning to school if the job turned out well. But what was the use of slaving your life away for such a little money? So I gave it up and now I am glad. I'm going to get a real job in a few years."

After working two months at the Laganas Shoe Co., and receiving only two pay envelopes reading 59 cents and $2.09, Penelope Poulicakos, 16, of 805 Varnum ave., Lowell, traded the cementing and brushing of shoes for housework in her own home.

Nickel and Penny After Week's Work

For the first week of her employment, after doing her job every day, she could only complete a neglible amount of cases. So she waited until the second week, hoping to have enough to give her a fair wage. After finishing 30 cases she sent her slip through and received 59 cents.

Repeating the same procedure for her second pay envelope after finishing 50 cases this time, she earned, according to her envelope, $2.09.

Claiming she actually worked three days cementing tabs for the Laganas company, but appearing for an entire week at the plant, Stella says she received a nickel and a penny as a week's salary . . . SIX CENTS.

This is the second such case of six cents recipients.

Gerry worked a year for the Majestic Shoe Co. His lowest wage was $2 and his highest, $5. He averaged between $4 and $5. In addition he had to pay a nickel for a notebook in which to record his work.

Mildred, who is one of a family of 13, although she herself is 19, claims never to have earned more than $3 at the Becker Brothers factory.

A series of six pay envelopes ranging in amounts from 67 cents to $1.55, representing six weeks of work, tell Johanna's story of work at the Laganas Shoe Co.

Bench Work Brings in Only $2.46 in Pay

A $2.46 weekly envelope tells a married woman's story of struggle in helping to support her family. Bench work at the Lowell Shoe Co., she discovered, was not profitable.

Hundreds of similar stories vividly picture the industrial strife that has taken hold of Lowell, slowly stifling its general run of business.

Lowell, which once boasted of its "fair and beautiful city," is trying bravely to reorganize its industrial system to send the shoe worker back to his bench and his tools, that he might again buy the products of the town's merchants.

Most of these workers are members of large families. On each one a definite responsibility has been placed. Because of the low wages and the shoe workers' fight against them, entire families are suffering, seeking relief from the many welfare agencies in the city.

(Further results of the survey of the sweatshops made by the Boston Evening American and Boston Sunday Advertiser will be published in tomorrow's Boston Evening American.)

Graves of Her Five Dogs to Be Decked Every September 2

Touching tribute to her "faithful friends and dearest pets," companions in her loneliness and guardians of her safety is paid to five dogs in the will of Mrs. Sarah Bowman Van Ness of Lexington, filed in Middlesex Probate Court.

The death of Mrs. Van Ness, descendant of Colonial settlers of Lexington, will not erase the memory of her pets' devotion.

Her will provides that part of her estate, valued at $44,000 shall be used to provide a permanent gift to the Angell Memorial Hospital in the form of an X-Ray machine or some other article for the relief of suffering animals.

"I wish a memorial," the will reads, "of need and service in memory of these dearly beloved pets, Charlie and Fannie, Little Tatsie, Happy and Little Terry, because of their love and devotion to me.

"Charlie guarded my home with me alone for 18 years. And Fannie gave the warning about a fire at a time when, if she had not warned me, my home would have been burned up.

"It is my wish that that on the second day of September in each year, their graves be covered with flowers so that children may be taught and impressed with the desire to be kind and considerate and affectionate to all dumb friends—animals."

Gandhi's Condition Pleases Doctors

Poona, India, May 16 (AP)—The Mahatma Gandhi was reported by physicians to be surprisingly well after the completion of the first week of his projected three-week fast.

The physicians said they were completely satisfied with his condition.

New R-D-R Process insures FRESHNESS in Gulf

Gulf's high-speed delivery system rushes fresh Gulf Gas to the pumps. And that gas stays fresh longer, due to Gulf's exclusive R-D-R process—a process that actually delays deterioration.

5 important facts about fresh gas

1. Fresh Gas starts faster than stale gas.
2. Fresh Gas gives you more power than stale gas.
3. Fresh Gas gives you more mileage.
4. Fresh Gas is higher in anti-knock rating than stale gas.
5. Fresh Gas is cleaner-burning—contains less motor fouling residue than stale gas.

BOSTON AMERICAN

Again Sets New Sales Records For "Greater Houghton Day"

THE HOUGHTON & DUTTON INC
BOSTON

EXECUTIVE OFFICES

May 8th, 1933

Mr. J. J. Cremmen
Advertising Director
Boston American
Boston, Mass.

Dear Mr. Cremmen:

When plans were made for our third "Greater Houghton Day" on May 6, high sales estimates were set for every department.

We were frankly amazed at results, which exceeded our most optimistic pre-sale estimate by 14%. Practically every department had the greatest business in the ninety years of the store's history. These increases were especially large in household furnishings, women's apparel, draperies, linens and domestics. The furniture department alone showed an increase of 30%.

Again the Boston American, with fourteen pages of promotion, gave a remarkable demonstration of pulling power, and deserves full credit for the striking success of the sale.

Your newspaper, and the response it brought, has fully justified our confidence in the improvement of buying power in Boston and New England.

Very truly yours,

President and General Manager

Facts! Briefly Told!

The Boston American carried 31,360 lines, or 78.5% of the newspaper advertising used to promote the sale.

Many departments throughout the store made all-time records in total volume of sales.

Note that the furniture department alone showed a 30% increase over the corresponding day last year.

Over 14,000 mail and 'phone orders were received.

Over 2000 extra employees and 50 'phone operators were used, an increase in personnel over 1932.

Here's Proof That the Boston American Will Pay Sales Dividends on Advertising Courage!

HAVING ATTENDED THE MATINEE PERFORMANCE of The Student Prince on Saturday afternoon where we were thrilled with the singing and princely appearance of Allen Jones, we are in the proper romantic mood of spring . . . soft zephyrs, apple blossoms, pale moons and whatever goes with it.

Had we realized that this light opera hero was offering Boston such an excellent performance, far better than we have ever heard the part sung or acted, we would have been to more than one matinee and evening . . . it was superb!

MRS. S. PARKER BREMER

The amazing thing was that the handsome Mr. Jones was singing with a bit of a handicap, too . . . we heard the story before we attended the show and were we surprised that he could sing at all after the "sock" on the chin he received when he was on a party two nights before . . . he is evidently a true soldier of the stage and carried on even though it hurt . . . and it must have pained him to take those high C's with a partially paralyzed chin.

The party was given by a popular man-about-town (whose popularity may not be so great in the future if racketeers keep crashing his affairs) and up to the time that a brawny brute arrived on the scene it was a perfectly nice party, a crowd of pretty girls from the stage shows in town and some friends . . .

The gate-crasher started talking with his hands to a pretty chorine and somebody interfered . . . we cannot tell you exactly HOW it all happened because we were not among those present, but we do know that the hero of The Student Prince played the hero in real life and tried to rescue the young lady . . . thereby hangs the tale. As the good-looking Mr. Jones is a HE-man (even though he does look like a prince and sing divinely), and a star athlete as well, we hear he gave a good account of himself before he was through with the racketeer . . . more power to him.

Another Musical Treat

IT WAS ALL A THING OF THE PAST as we sat enthralled by his magnificent performance as Carl-Franz . . . but it was thrilling to think that sometimes heroes on the stage are heroes in life, too. We believe that Allen Jones is being seriously considered as leading man opposite Madame Jeritza in her new opera, "A Night in Venice," if he has not already been signed up, and what a marvelous performance that will be. We adore the Jeritza and will anticipate hearing Mr. Jones sing with her, an inspiration indeed.

We were so indignant when we heard of some dumb brute attacking a young man whose future and livelihood depend on his appearance and magnificent voice, a rare talent to be guarded well, that we wish we knew the name of his assailant so that if we ever meet him (and you know we do meet everyone from princes to pirates in this newspaper business) we can tell him what we think of his behavior. Some people have no more regard for fine things than a pig has for cream pie.

Saturday was our musical treat . . . after a delicious dinner at the Charlotte Cushman Club we motored up to the Pops at Symphony Hall and what a rare treat was in store for us there . . . Arthur Feidler is indeed the artist to know so well what pleases his summer audience . . . we sat at the small tables, sipping Pabst beer and it WAS beer, listening to the pieces we loved so well and dreamed that we were enjoying OUR student days again . . . if not in Heidelberg, at least we know the spirit of youth, dreams and romance . . .

Miss Camilla Alsop, her young daughter, will be a debutante of the coming season.

Chatty Notes of Social Circles

OUT OF TOWN GUESTS who will be entertained by Mr. and Mrs. Frederick L. Dabney of Dover next Saturday night, before the overall dance at the Dedham Polo and Country Club, will include Mr. and Mrs. Henry Parish, Mr. and Mrs. Richard Trimble, and Mr. Samuel Ferguson, Jr., of New York. Other guests will be Mr. and Mrs. Nicholas Biddle, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Cabot Lodge, Mr. Eliot T. Putnam, Mr. Nathaniel Hamlen and Mr. William Patterson.

MISS EVELYN ROYCE OF Dedham will be another dinner hostess before the Country Club dance in Dedham. Miss Royce is a member of the committee in charge and assisting her are Miss Emily Davis, Miss Dorothea Frothingham, Mrs. Albert S. Sigelow and Mrs. Frederick C. Church, Jr.

ENTRIES FOR THE CHESTNUT HILL Horse Show on May 20 at the Longwood Cricket Club grounds will close today, according to the announcement by the horse show committee, Mrs. Robert B. Almy, Mrs. Richard Ely Danielson and Mr. Frederick Ayer will act as judges at this show. As usual there will be a stand-up lunch for those participating in the events at the Longwood Cricket Club.

Vincent Club Elects Today

The annual spring luncheon and business meeting of the Vincent Club takes place today at The Country Club for the election of officers.

Mrs. William C. Cox, the president, presides at the business meeting, after which there is luncheon, with golf and tennis on the afternoon's program, for members.

This annual meeting of the Vincent Club always brings out all of Boston society's leaders, who are anxious to be on hand to help put their favorite ones into the coveted offices.

Social Curves

MISS CHANNING WEDS IN JUNE

MISS VIRGINIA VOGEL, attractive daughter of the Augustus H. Vogels of Old Orchard rd., Chestnut Hill, is one of the popular debs who likes to toss around a baseball these fair spring days. She was snapped at a recent social event putting across some fast curves for the cause of sweet charity. Society's young set welcomes every chance to take up any outdoor sport, especially when some one of its pet organizations benefits.

Late Afternoon Ceremony in Garden

Miss Katherine Channing, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Morse Channing of Sherborn, has completed plans for her marriage to Mr. Edward Pendleton Herring, son of Mrs. Agnes K. Herring and the late Dr. Arthur P. Herring of Baltimore. The ceremony is to take place the afternoon of June 21 in the garden of her parents' estate in Sherborn, attended only by members of the two families.

The bride-elect was graduated from the Winsor school in 1926, from the Garland school in 1929, and from the Boston Nursery school the following year. She made her debut at a tea given by her mother at the family home in June, 1926, and is now director of the Brattle Street Nursery School in Cambridge, also president of the Nursery School Conference group.

Mr. Herring is a graduate of Johns Hopkins, class of 1925, where he took his A. B. Degree, and later took his Ph. D. in 1923. He is at present an instructor in the department of government at Harvard. The engagement was announced last December.

New Styles of the Fashionables

By Dorothy Whipple Fry

THE spring dance at the Phi Beta Club at Harvard was a great success. Many of the gay young ladies and dashing swains assembled in fancy costume. Mrs. Frances Ward Paine was one of the chaperones, wearing an attractive blue lace gown, low in the back, with a bunch of pink roses and a dainty pink organdie coatee with puffy sleeves, suggestive of blue skies and apple blossoms.

Miss Marjorie Turner, with her attractive swirl bob, attended as a cow-girl, in blue overalls, striped shirt and red bandana.

Mr. Richard Pratt, tall and handsome son of Mr. and Mrs. Swan Hartwell of West Newton, escorted a charming young lady in a pearl grey outfit, grey fur collar with a neat matching hat.

Mr. George Bennett at least managed to keep his hands warm wearing red and white football mittens with a pair of very abbreviated track pants.

Miss Jean Hart looked smart in a brown sport outfit. She is an attractive blonde, full of pep and good looking.

Books--Many Other Things

By Charles Hanson Towne

In his introduction to "Hoover After Dinner" (Scribner's), Theodore G. Joslin, who acted as secretary to the President, says:

"That Herbert Hoover has a gift of humor—a vein of whimsicality known to all his associates—would come as news to most people. The comment would be that scarcely a hint of this quality has ever appeared in the countless columns written about him in the last two decades, nor has he revealed it in his public appearances." (Cries of "Why not?") "If, ignoring the comment, I were to amplify the statement by saying that twice a year throughout his administration" (Cries of "Why only twice?") "the former President cast aside the most exacting peace-time duties in the history of our Republic to participate in good-natured raillery and to reinforce burdensome discussions that have weighed upon him during the four years he has been in office with good-natured banter, the assertions might be received with incredulity by those who have not had an intimate acquaintance with him. Yet, between the covers of this book is ample proof of the foregoing in his own words."

So one picks up this little volume with high hope. In vain I have sought for the elusive humor of Mr. Hoover. Can it be that Mr. Joslin thinks it is humor when the then Secretary of Commerce, speaking before the Iowa Society of Washington, alluded to his boyhood in that state, and told—rascal that he must have been—how he sledded down Cook's hill, "that great, long hill where, on winter nights, we slid down at terrific speeds (sic) with our tummies tight to the home-made sleds"?

Hoover ended his speech before the Izaak Walton League by saying: "I am for fish. Fishing is not so much getting fish as it is a state of mind and a lure to the human soul into refreshment. But it is too long between bites; we must have more fish in proportion to the water."

There was no suggestion as to how this could be brought about.

But it is when Mr. Hoover is most serious that he is funniest. He ominously mix his metaphors in such a way that he might have induced grins. Listen:

"The sweet sound of the old-fashioned cowbell has been undermined by the barbed wire fence."

And this is a gem of observation: "There is no noise in the world that so fills one's heart with alarm and foreboding as the telephone bell. This is especially true of office-holders. The good tidings always arrive by mail."

I doubt if even a wet banquet could have suppressed a laugh out of such a remark. How must it have sounded with only ice water on the table? Or white morsels like this were offered, what happened?

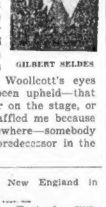
"This civilization is not going to depend upon what we do when we work, so much as what we do in our time off."

True to Type

By GILBERT SELDES

Lopez (Alias Cook) Still Headman Comedian

In the current Cosmopolitan there is a piece by Alexander Woollcott about Joe Cook, the one man show of vaudeville days, the boy who always manages to mention Evansville in the course of an evening's entertainment, the actor whom I once nominated for number one post in vaudeville, adding that I doubted very much whether he would go in musical shows. So he went in musical shows, indicating his contempt for critics, however friendly. The attractive piece Mr. Woollcott has written gives me a fatherly feeling, for Joe Cook was the starting point of the single occasion when Mr. Woollcottt and I lunched together. I had met Mr. Cook; Woolcott wanted to meet him. Cook was, at that time, neutral on the subject, but, as always, very obliging. My guests got on well together, but nothing seemed to click perfectly until Cook mentioned the fact that his real name was Lopez and that his father had been a Spanish artist. Then Woollcott's eyes danced, for a favorite theory of his had been upheld—that people on the stage always have an ancestor on the stage, or at least in the related arts. The theory baffled me because I figured that the thing had to start somewhere—somebody had to go on the stage without an artistic predecessor in the family. But Woolcott was firm.



GILBERT SELDES

Typically American

In ten years a theory may be discarded, but the ten years since Joe Cook leaped into fame have not changed the essential things in his work. Half Spanish he may be, but he is a typical American entertainer. He still loves a practical joke (his home, as Woollcott notes, is full of surprises); he exaggerates like Mark Twain (with three dozen butlers for a lark); his mechanical ingenuity is amazing and the contraptions by which he causes a single note to be struck are like Goldberg's inventions.

At the same time he has a great love of elaborate wordage as when he explains why he will not imitate the impossible number of four Hawaiians, or advises people not to eat dry cereals without cream. Above all his straight-faced seriousness in the midst of wild extravagances is positively New England in tone.

A bit of New England, a little of New York, a lot of the Middle West—make up Joe Cook. Plus talent which isn't the property of any particular place. I guessed wrong about his success in musical shows; I ought to guess now that he would not do a radio so that he could prove me wrong again. But I have heard him and his special character comes clearly over the air—which is more important than making a few puns. As the moment I should say the radio needs him more than it can possibly imagine.

A number of educators have been expressing their worries about the studies now set before children. Dr. J. F. Williams of Teachers College has protested that we teach children many things "as unrelated to American life as the practices of the Grand Lama of Tibet" and, at the same time, has asked for education in play. Dr. George S. Counts (who brought the New Russia's Primer to our attention two years ago) said that "a collectivist society is in the process of emerging from an individualistic past" and that education ought to prepare for it. Dean Russell also looked beyond the present crisis and said that while individual great men might carry us through our difficulties the future lay in the hands of children now in school.

If we have the slightest conviction that we will have a future, these problems are, (without a doubt, more important than inflation and farm relief. In fact inflation and farm relief are only worth worrying about because they do (or do not) insure a future for the children now learning about the world; and their learning ought to prepare them to grapple with difficulties they will meet fifteen and twenty years from now. The central problem of education must be how to guess what the world will be like a generation ahead—and how to prepare children for it.

A Few Distractions

About the Grand Lama of Tibet I know little, but I assume that his habits of life differ from our own. Yet I can see good reasons for learning about him and others equally remote things, while at school. A student at college twenty years ago might have learned a thousand things about the modern world, about banking and politics and economics, which would now be utterly worthless to him—even worse, for they would have made it hard for him to unlearn and to adjust himself to new facts. Whereas anyone who learned something about the ancient Egyptians would at least have something pleasant to entertain his mind when the stock market broke and the capitalist system began to wobble. It is all very well to be practical, but you can carry it a little too far.

Pottery Guild to Hold Sale

The annual exhibition and tea of the Paul Revere Pottery Guild will be in the studios and grounds of The Pottery, Nottinghill rd., Brighton, Friday and Saturday, from 10 to 6. "THE MARRY-GO-ROUND" OFFERS SOME AMUSING STOP SIGNALS — HELEN ROWLAND

Success in Love Consists Not in Knowing How to Hold a Man, But When to LET GO

By Helen Rowland

AT THIS dangerous season, a man is afraid to PRETEND that he's in love—for fear he may take himself seriously.

* * *

Among the prominent modern women are many who have achieved great success as matrimonial failures.

* * *

No matter how long they live, no man will ever get all the amusement he wants and no woman will ever get all the love she craves.

Helen Rowland

Don't part with those awful white elephants you receive as wedding presents. They are the one thing about marriage that you can be sure will last forever.

When a girl sets her heart on a married man, she usually discovers that his wife is like his Country. He will admit that almost everything seems to be wrong with her, yet you can't make him give her up.

There is no crime in wiping the dishes. But almost any man would rather be caught breaking into the baby's bank than holding a dish-towel.

* * *

A woman has to pause for breath, after getting over one love-affair, before plunging into another; but a man can double the act and pass himself on the way without the slightest strain on his heart.

* * *

There is no question in the modern girl's mind about the propriety of proposing to a hesitant young man. The only question is whether to go down on her knees and risk spoiling the crease in her new trousers.

* * *

The average man spends half his time scolding a woman for worrying so much—and the other half giving her something to worry about.

Girl Gambled With Love—and Lost

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX

I have been going with a certain fellow for almost a year. We were the best of pals. I just don't know what got into me but about a month ago I quit going with him, and began going with anybody and everybody. I thought at first it was smart, but it didn't take me long to realize that I was gambling with love and lost. The same thing happened before. I got a crazy notion that I wasn't getting everything out of life, and I did practically the same thing. Won't you please help me? VIOLA.

Dear Viola: No use scolding you, my dear Viola, even though you've done the same foolish thing twice. What's happened to the young man, meantime, you don't tell me. Has he consoled himself with a girl who is less given to these capricious experiments? If not, "toss up that you've acted foolish and say you're sorry. Perhaps he'll come back. Often they do.

The Usual Married Man Arguments

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX

I'm twenty-one and really in love with a married man of twenty-five. We've been going together for seven months. He says his wife has only his name, but that I have his heart. He would like to take me away, but he has two children and he can't leave them. He says he doesn't love his wife and doesn't care what she does. He's living with her but for the children's sake because they are small. Do you think he stays with her for the children's sake, or does he still care for his wife and should I keep on with him? I really love him. THINKING.

Dear Thinking: When I get a letter like yours, my dear, as soon as I come to the words "He's married," I would close my eyes and fill in the gentleman's arguments for persuading a girl to make all the sacrifices to his.

Children are the usual excuse, and very good excuses they are for no nice girl, such as you are likes the responsibility of breaking up the home to which children are entitled. But to judge from the thousands of letters I have had, these married side-steppers-from-responsibility are no more loyal to the girls who "give all" than they were to their legally married wives. Philandering with another woman's husband is a poor prospect for any girl. My advice is to quit.

Good Cheer as Beauty's Aid

By HELEN FOLLETT

REGARD HOUSEKEEPING as drudgery and there's danger of acquiring a drudge's face. Faces are ever in the making, clouded or radiant according to the inner life one leads. What a loud laugh our foremothers would hand the women who looks upon housekeeping as a tough job. They made their clothes and washed them, lugged water from the well, carried in firewood, toted out ashes, swept heavy carpets with a broom, put on wall paper and when occasion demanded helped to shingle the roof. They may have looked pretty terrible in curl papers and calico wrappers, but they had courage and high spirit, qualities of beauty of no small value.

BUST DEVELOPING consists of gentle massage with coco butter or lanolin, an alcohol rub every other day, cold sponging in the morning, arm swinging exercises. Good, posture helps, so do breathing exercises.

LISTEN, WORLD!

By Elsie Robinson

We're Fed Up on Fakes

SHE'S SEVENTEEN, graduates from Hi this year, and is going to be a Writer. So—will I tell her what is the secret of successful writing?

Elsie Robinson

Living, youngster. Living is the secret of every successful writing—as it is the secret of every other success. Not how much can you talk about how you have lived; that's the test of your power as a writer, or any other kind of a worker in this thing and that.

Twan't always so. Time was when writing was a matter of Fancy Flourishes. Dig up some of the speeches that held 'em spellbound, back in the 80's. What did they sound like? Like nothing human. Just a lot of bafalutin', sumbit words, with here and there a phrase that sent you whizzing like a rocket.

Plenty of rules for writing, then—complicated curliques—as many trick holds as a wrestling bout. And plenty of time to learn them in. For those were leisure days and writing was a frilly indoor sport for choosey souls who couldn't tackle a regular work-out.

But those times have passed, let us hope, forever. And today writing ties up with all our commonplace human experience—or it doesn't rate. No time now for fancy flourishes. For life, in 1933, is a heckuva handful, and most of us are having a tough time hanging on. Any of the literati who aspire to write like parlor whatnots had better take up picture puzzles instead.

If you want to write, you must live.

And you'll be able to write as much, and only as much, as you have lived.

For it isn't the word that gets across, but the experience behind the word. If you know what you're talking about, they'll grab you and ask for more. But if you're just making synthetic sounds—the line will go dead, little girl.

And that applies to every other department of life, as well as writing.

The world is fed up on fakes. We've heard too much pretty palaver; we've listened to too many phoney promises; we've watched too many grandstand gestures. The hocus-pocus boys can still fool a few.

while. After that, God help 'em! Somebody's due to get bumped!

Why are columnists? That's why. Columnists are humans who write as they run. And no come to know Life As Is, with its sweat and its tears—and its wistful, weary, tragic, twisted smile.

All of which means what to a little girl in High School? It means, youngster, that you'd better take as your slogan in life that old Greek motto which was my own "class motto" in Hi. Perhaps my spelling has gone askew but I think it ran something like this—"EINAI OUK DOKEIN"—TO BE; NOT TO SEEM.

It isn't enough any more to "seem." That would have gotten your grandmother by in 1850. Or your own mother in 1900. But it won't get you by in 1933. You'll have to be the thing you seem—or the world will call your bluff.

No matter what career you choose—writer, wife, congresswoman, or buyer for a notion counter—you'll have to know your stuff; you'll have to give the other fellow what he needs. And the only way you'll know his need is to have felt it yourself.

You may have the beauty of Helen, little sister, and the brain of Minerva, and the come-hither of the whole Follies Chorus—YET YOU'RE ONLY AS VALUABLE AS YOU'RE USEFUL IN 1933.

And that goes for Dictators, Presidents, Senators, Captains of Industry and Big Shots in Art—as well as common mutts like you and me.

IF YOU HAVEN'T GOT THE REAL GOODS, YOU NEEDN'T COME AROUND!

Beach, Bathing Costumes Run the Gamut of New Fabrics

By Margaret Matson

ALREADY PEOPLE are beginning to ask our advice about their bathing togs for this coming season. It would take us a whole book's worth of words to tell you all that is new in beach attire, but the thing that impresses us most is the practicalness of the whole array. We predict that we won't see so many of the wide-bottomed flowered pajamas on the beaches this summer.

The predominance will be in solid colors and in stripes—stripes of all sizes from the pin and pencil variety up to the bold awning stripes. And the outfits will comprise more slacks than pajamas, some beach skirts or beach dresses, some shorts, and a great many jackets or cardigans slipped on over the bathing suit leaving the legs bare. On the smartest of the smart folk one will doubtless see some of the new linen plus-fours, the latest idea in beach clothes.

They are worn most frequently with the little jersey shirts striped or plain that one sees everywhere, and which are the most practical choice in the world to accompany one's yachting pajamas or slacks. Many of the bathing suits are assembled with jackets or cardigans and with extra shorts, a beach skirt, or a pair of pajama trousers, so that instead of an extra sweater blouse, one wears simply her bathing suit beneath.

Fabrics comprise everything from rubber, and lastex which is part rubber, through linens, cottons, wool jerseys, knitted wools, to silks that "won't go near the water." Dotted Swiss and net are most attractive ensemble seen recently. The hat was made to match.

Wrap-around frocks of linen, pique, gingham, and jersey, sometimes two of them combined make up a classification by themselves and should be tremendously popular. They're exceedingly cool, easy to slip into, and may be worn over one's bathing suit or over cotton undies.

Backs are cut even lower than they were last year—if that is possible. And the decolletage extends under the arm as well as down the back. Let no one tell you that suntan will not be popular, for those who really enjoy the water will not even attempt to avoid it.

ANSWER to T. J. J.—Please forgive the long delay. Black boots may be worn informally if you like. For summer your best bet might be of white or natural linen with a cotton broadcloth shirt and a linen or cotton tie. Or you might have cotton whipcord breeches with a cotton or polo shirt and a flannel, tweed or chamois coat. Many girls ride without hats or with berets or scarfs on their heads. You might do likewise, or get a little brimmed felt, that will match in white, black or a light color. Just be sure your riding shirts are long enough not to pull out and embarrass you, and wear stout gloves that will protect your hands. It pays to have whatever you wear very well fitted. You need them snug through the knees and free through the shoulders.

And here's a bit of advice in a whisper. Riding breeches are sometimes prone to chafe just above the knee on the inside where you rub against the saddle. If this is the case, wear a pair of undies that are long enough to protect you. It might be well, also, to have a slipon jersey sweater which can supplement your outfit in chilly weather.

This is the BOSTON EVENING AMERICAN SCHOOL OF CLOTHES. Please address your inquiries to Margaret Matson.

By Dr. R. S. Copeland

RECENTLY I WROTE about anemia and described the advancement made in the cure of this disease. Today I want to tell you about another anemic condition called "chlorosis."

Dr. Copeland

Chlorosis is a strange affliction. It occurs almost exclusively in young girls between eighteen and twenty-five years of age. Sufferers from this disease are always pale. The victim is usually confined to badly lighted and poorly ventilated rooms.

The disease is rarely, if ever encountered in country-bred girls or city-bred girls who are given the benefits of fresh air and sunlight.

Chlorosis is an anemic disorder of the blood. In contrast to other forms of anemia, the victim of this disease has a greenish pallor. It is for this reason that chlorosis is often spoken of as the "green sickness." The complexion at times may have a peculiar yellow-green tinge.

Breathlessness, palpitation of the heart, constipation, dyspeptic disorders, loss of appetite, and fever are other frequent symptoms. Fainting is common and marked emotional and nervous disturbances may complicate the picture. In some instances the face, hands and ankles become swollen.

Girls afflicted with chlorosis are nervous, easily irritated and extremely sensitive. Too often a spell of irritability and melancholia are overlooked as possible symptoms of this disease. Young girls in large cities, away from their usual friends may confine themselves indoors and become subject to chlorosis. The social conditions and hygienic surroundings are important considerations in the prevention and cure of this peculiar form of anemia.

I am glad to say that chlorosis is not as common today as it was in the latter part of the nineteenth century. Perhaps this is due to our better understanding and appreciation of simple hygiene laws. Adequate rest, plenty of fresh air, sunlight and nourishing foods are essential for the cure as well as the prevention of this disease.

Since most sufferers from chlorosis are victims of constipation, it is important that faulty elimination be corrected. A daily enema should be given each morning until signs of improvement are noted. Fresh fruits and vegetables, such as figs, prunes, celery, spinach, carrots, string beans, figs, dates, raisins and prunes, should be added to the diet. These foods supply the "bulk" or "roughage" essential for normal elimination.

Sufferers from constipation should drink six to eight glasses of water daily. All food should be taken at definite and regular hours. Exercise of some kind should be taken every day. Proper elimination explains the cure which overcomes the anemic disorder. It is advisable that the doctor direct the form of exercise and determine what is most beneficial for the patient.

LOOK OUT FOR THESE SYMPTOMS OF CONSTIPATION

Get Relief With Kellogg's ALL-BRAN

Headaches, loss of appetite and energy, sallow complexions, and sleeplessness are often warning signs of common constipation. Unless checked, constipation may impair health.

Today, you can get rid of common constipation by simply eating a delicious cereal. Laboratory tests show that Kellogg's ALL-BRAN provides "bulk" to exercise the intestines, and vitamin B to further aid regularity. ALL-BRAN is also a good source of blood-building food.

The "bulk" in ALL-BRAN is much like that in leafy vegetables. Inside the body, it forms a soft mass. Gently, it clears the intestines of wastes. How much better than taking patent medicines.

Two tablespoonfuls daily will overcome most types of constipation. Serious cases, with every meal. If not relieved this way, see your doctor.

Enjoy ALL-BRAN as a cereal, or use in cooking. Appetizing recipes on the red-and-green package. At all grocers. Made by Kellogg in Battle Creek.

DAILY TRUE STORY -:- -:- The Love Test

THERE WAS NOTHING of the hero about Charlie Herrick although he was good-looking enough as young men go and he was universally liked for his cheery smile and good nature.

But Paula Dix who had pronounced views on [illegible] him and when half [illegible] well him, as the best [illegible] no, I mean [illegible] Ann [illegible] from the females of [illegible] when I [illegible] town and who had [illegible] of friends of a run of [illegible] the Charlie jacket.

But he was discreet to mask any [illegible] companions, he did it all by invitation and as he was Paula frequently at parties and dances and paid her marked attention.

"What do you see in that fellow?" he asked her; "pretty soon I'll begin to be jealous."

Charlie laughed as he said it, for Paula was correct enough as to the answer to [illegible] Charlie I never met anyone who had so many [illegible] admirers as Bud. You can't help admiring a man who fought [illegible] and headhunters and be so modest about it."

A REAL THRILL

"Like all heroes," remarked Charlie, dryly.

"Yes," echoed Paula, "can realize when he's talking that he takes it all as a matter of course."

"Gives you a real thrill?" questioned Charlie.

"I see," said Charlie; "well I agree with you."

"Then you aren't angry because he seems to like me?" she asked.

"Of course not, I regard it as a compliment to both of us."

Paula was a little disappointed. Most of the young men she knew would have flown into a rage. She was most surprised when Charlie went imperturbably on: "See here, my dear—I know you're going to marry me but I'd be a fool and would be a fool if you found yourself the wife of an ordinary every day man when you might have been the bride of a hero. I tell you what I'm going to do. I'm going to give you and Bud a clear road. I'm going to give you a chance to prove he's all he says he is."

"Why, Charlie," cried Paula, "whoever heard of such a thing? You mean to say you don't think Bud has done all the things I've told you about?"

"I don't think anything," answered Charlie. "All I want is proof."

"And then? asked Paula.

"Then we'll know where we're at. Isn't that fair?"

When he left Paula at the door of her home he kissed her good-bye just as if nothing unusual had happened, and she went inside to think over what he had said.

Certainly she couldn't accuse him of a mad jealousy; that made her a little uneasy. She began to wonder if he really loved her. She wondered what Bud would do under similar circumstances. On the whole she felt the excitement of the situation and when Bud asked her, as he had many times before, to go driving with him she accepted to his manifest astonishment.

One evening after dark they had halted on a little used road over which big trees formed a canopy, shutting out the sky, when a figure appeared in front of the small car and, raising a menacing hand in which gleamed the glint of nickel, commanded them to throw up their hands.

Paula across to Bud, in a trembling voice, demand the cause of the interruption.

"Hand over your money," muttered the holdup man and get out of that car."

"But—but——" stammered Bud.

"Out," commanded the other and leveled the shining thing in his hand at the young man's head.

Very gingerly Bud stepped out of the car.

"But you aren't going to leave me," shrieked Paula.

The only answer was the sound of scurrying feet as Bud, pretending to come nearer to deliver his belongings, scurried away in the darkness, leaving Paula to her fate.

For a moment she could hardly believe her senses. Then her anger rose. "Who are you?" she demanded of the intruder. "I suppose now that that man has run away, like a coward, you'll rob me too. Well, try it—well, just you try it."

For answer the holdup man walked around to the other side of the car and climbed into Bud's seat.

"What are you going to do" Where are you taking me?" Paula snatched at his sleeve.

"Well, my dear," said Charlie, pressing the button on the flashlight in his hand which Bud had mistaken for a pistol, "how about taking you home—unless, of course, you want to hunt for that hero."

Paula's answer was all that Charlie could have hoped for, and as they drove home in Bud's car they went on with the plans for their marriage although Bud had never entered the picture.

GIRL ASKED FOR KISSES, DOCTOR TESTIFIES

THIS IS LIFE

Here's a Chance to Tune In on High—If You Believe It

By ROBERT E. ROGERS

R. E. ROGERS

I OFTEN WONDER whether columnists or college professors receive the most extraordinary mail. I do not mean in the way of personal letters, expressing individual points of view, for there the columnist undoubtedly wins. I mean the extraordinary publications that cost good money for printing to little groups all over the United States. They come to the desk of the college teacher and the newspaper man alike, publications political, economic and religious; business men airing their notions about the state of the nation, radical groups with their particular shibboleths, organs of chambers of commerce and labor unions, groups preoccupied with disarmament and international peace.

For a whole year I was on the mailing list of a sect which is worrying about the imminent Second Coming, and I got to learn more about the Book of Revelation, the antichrist, and the beast with seven heads than I would have believed possible. Publications anti-Catholic, anti-Jewish, anti-Communist are all in the ordinary day's work. Curiously, publications are nearly always anti-something; seldom are they pro anything.

Whole Life's Study Wasted

I received one this morning which makes me feel that I have been wasting a reasonably long and fairly busy life. The English teacher nowadays must, in the nature of things, be a kind of universal scholar. Everything is fish that comes to the net of the 19th century and 20th century literature. For years, therefore, I have read everything of all sorts that I could lay my hands on, in order to be able to check one science by another, one point of view by its opposite.

Now I see myself as having labored and studied in vain. All knowledge, all wisdom even, is open to me without labor or effort—save perhaps certain pecuniary requirements—if I only would subscribe to the HIGH ASTRAL TRIBUNAL TELEGRAF (sic) SERVICE DAY AND NIGHT, located somewhere out in the Middle West, the home of spiritual illumination.

The sheet is headed:

"Wanted Scientific Secrets to Solve, Justifying Large Voluntary Subsidies to American Tribunal's Cause." Later in the sheet it says:

"Wanted Well-to-do Patients Overjoyed to Extent Large Voluntary Thank Offerings" and is signed by a gentleman calling himself "King of Physicians."

Listen for a moment to the native wood notes wild of these altruistic gentlemen, concerning the Logus Observatory and the Astral Wisdom:

We have an instrument called the "Logos Observatory to which high astrals come at appointed times, dates and places—and move the sensitive mechanism, thus swiftly spelling out answers to our questions, which they hear. They are to enable us to photograph them. They promise to materialize before us at some session. They tell us that humanity has lacked intelligence to work out such intercourse with the 'unseen' universe—until we concentrated on the problem and had the necessary faith in God to be assisted by his messengers of light. We have endured discouragements, large financial outlay and many years of collaborated toil, research and science. The technic is so extensive that outsiders cannot get results until they have submitted to long training. Few possess the requirements to succeed.

"Can Tune in on High"

"Constructive propositions befitting humanity alone can be considered. It is for high astrals to decide whether problems submitted are worthy of their solution (Transmitted March 18, 1933). They have agreed to inform us how copper can be tempered. Also how magnetism can be insulated. Had Edison been in-tune with the Peraonality, God, instead of a sort of pantheist groper he would have been enabled to 'discover' one continuous stream of marvels which the American Tribunal is now being transmitted and swiftly putting into execution.

"The 'Logos Observatory' was brought to its present stage by high astrals. Megalomaniacs call themselves 'inventora!' No really great discovery is an invention, because all progress is first worked out by high astral master minds. Those with sensitized minds are inspired and directed by high astrals such as now are furnishing the generalship of the American Tribunal."

Now there, I take it, is something worth while. These gentlemen who have discovered the art of tuning in on these High Astrals are able to tap the intellectual resources of the universe. They will answer all serious questions—no vulgar fortune telling, you understand, no questions as to whether who should marry whom—they will settle problems of international import, and they will cure disease by astral consultation.

All that is apparently necessary in the Seeker, the candidate, the neophyte, is plenty of faith and plenty of money. People who come under the head of "atheists-agnostics-deists" need not apply.

The High Astrals, if my informants may be believed, offered to cure Mayor Cermak of Chicago, but, their offer being rejected, prophesied his death at the hands of the earth-bound physicians.

You Might Send 'Em Warnings

The great ones of Europe may also have the benefit of the esoteric knowledge of the High Astrals, as passed on through the medium of the gentlemen who manage the cash register. If you really want to help along world progress you may pay for telegrams to be sent to members of the administration in Washington and for cables to Mussolini, Hitler, Stalin, and lesser lights, informing them what the High Astrals expect them to do. Then if the world explodes into war, your conscience at least will be clear.

"Categorical inquiries answered supernaturally by world's guardian angels working for peace on earth, who transmit this."

Obviously the London Economic conference will be only an expensive substitute for the real thing. Equally obviously, Mr. Roosevelt might just as well dismiss his Brain Trust, who work upon a low earth-bound plan, and make arrangements to set up a Logos Observatory under High Astral control in the White House. It is doubtful whether the High Astrals would be content with a 15 per cent cut, as they obviously are above mundane and sordid considerations of the sort. They haven't yet gone off the gold standard.

But mostly I wish that Hollywood had consulted the High Astrals before producing "Gabriel Over the White House." What does Hollywood know of the secrets of the astral world? Poor earth-bound Mr. Will Hays! He doesn't know the half of it, dearie!

ELY AND CURLEY OPEN A DRIVE FOR REPEAL

Governor, Mayor Talk at Meeting in City City Club Today

Gov. Ely, Lieut.-Gov. Bacon and Mayor Curley, and the battery of public at the formal opening of the [illegible] Republican Headquarters, 41 Commonwealth ave., which is the wet organization, which has been invited to attend.

A get-together luncheon was held yesterday for the wet delegates at the Parker House. Some trouble developed through the reluctance of Carl Terry, chairman of the Republican state committee, to pledge his party organization to the wet ticket. Chairman Joseph Maynard of the Democratic state committee, pledged his party's support to the wet slate everywhere.

Chairman Terry finally agreed, he would poll the state committee by mail on the points at issue on Otherwise the wet candidates of both parties made no progress toward the co-operation they desire in order to secure a vote in the coming meeting of delegates. Preliminary plans were discussed.

BROGNA PAYS GANGLAND PRICE ON OTHER VICTIM'S SPOT

Gang vengeance moves, not always swiftly, but nearly always surely and sometimes spectacularly. George Brogna, outside the law for 18 years, since he was eight, and long on the spot, hid behind a little black mustache for a time, but the disguise was penetrated and gangland evened up its score with him almost on the identical spot near the corner of Fenno and Borden sts., Revere, where "Sphinx-Face" Toscani went to his death two years ago. Perhaps Brogna was there that night, police say, and perhaps he was taken there again last night as the chosen spot for Toscani's friends to wreak their vengeance.

Asylum Head Reads in $50,000 Buswell Suit of Maid's Actions

One [illegible] at Danvers State Hospital, [illegible] the symptoms of [illegible] exhibited by Miss Thyne [illegible] former servant maid, were [illegible] the symptoms of [illegible]

A [illegible] doctor, a woman and a [illegible] at a doctors' [illegible] at the hospital indicated [illegible] thought the two things were [illegible] the same.

Three [illegible] were made to [illegible] Superior Court, where Miss Niemi is suing for former employer H. Lee Buswell, for $50,000 on the [illegible] that she was "railroaded" to the asylum, and where her alleged [illegible] for kisses were revealed.

Miss Niemi, was a model inmate according to admissions of Dr. Clarence A. Bonner, superintendent of the hospital.

Dr. Bonner, under cross-examination [illegible] Superior Court, read from the maid's report card covering her first four days at the hospital, when she was in a ward for [illegible] patients.

The card, with an entry by attendants for each of the four days at [illegible]

"Violent—No. No. No. No.
"Depressed—Yes. Yes. No. No.
"Tidy or untidy—Tidy. Tidy. Tidy. Tidy."

NAEGELE TO TESTIFY

Charles Naegele, pianist and friend of the Buswells, with whom Miss Niemi had fallen in love, was expected to follow Dr. Bonner as a witness.

Dr. Bonner said that, even disregarding the history of her case as related to doctors of the butler and various others, he still believed Miss Niemi was suffering from mental [illegible]

"That phrase, 'mental illness,' covers a multitude of sins," asked Atty. James Graham, launching his cross-examination.

The witness replied that [illegible] never admitted that the phrase did cover a great many things.

Dr. Bonner then read [illegible] Dr. Bonner read from the record of the girl's admission, which preceded the entry [illegible] the "noisy" ward. The record read:

"When admitted she was crying. She asked to be taken to friends. Asked why she was brought to the hospital. When not crying, closed her eyes and refused to talk. Confused, excited and depressed."

ASKED FOR KISSES

He admitted she took the proper amount of food and admitted he had written to a district court judge stating the contrary.

The hospital superintendent was then forced to read the "history" of Miss Niemi's condition, based on statements by her uncle; Mrs. Patti, a friend; Buswell's butler and the latter's wife, and Miss Atwater, Buswell's secretary.

This history read:

"She has few friends and is very particular about making friends. Seems to be secretive. For last year she visited friends and relatives rarely. Listened at doors. Imagined hearing talk of herself.

"Has appeared about the house in the nude. Asked chauffeur and butler to kiss her. Threatened suicide. Threatened to poison everyone. Believes herself engaged to Mr. Naegele. Claimed ring of Mrs. Buswell's and harbors resentment against her because of that incident.

"Stood on a parapet and threatened to jump. Talked of gold bracelets and candy gifts from Naegele. Antagonistic to Miss Atwater, said, 'They will be happy and content when they are rid of me.' Said her employers talked about her. Thought they were jealous.

"Denied making suicide threats, but admitted she wanted to die. Told doctors her mail was tampered with and letters from Naegele intercepted. Denied appearing nude or in bloomers and doing her work poorly.

FOUR KITTENS JOINED TOGETHER AT BIRTH

Revere claims one of the most unique of modern freaks—the birth of four kittens with their bodies joined, just as comes to pass in the birth of Siamese twins. The four kittens are owned by Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Breen, of 106 Mountain ave., Revere. The one kitten in back is almost black as coal—others are white and grey with slight spots of white. They are but a few days old. There is little hope that the kittens—joined in this freak manner—will live long. Often temporary joining together is rectified by the removal of a membrane of rather tough substance in the birth of kittens.

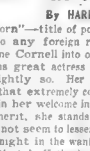
SUPERB CAST IN "ALIEN CORN"

Katharine Cornell Surrounded by Capable Cast in "Alien Corn" at the Plymouth

By HARRIS MORGAN

"Alien Corn"—title of poetic origin and with no reference whatsoever to any foreign rival to the Dixie brew—ushered Miss Katharine Cornell into our midst, last night. Always the coming of this great actress is made the occasion of vast acclaim, and rightly so. Her record and present performance ever deserve that extremely cordial reception, a perfect sample of which lay in her welcome into the Plymouth for a two weeks' stay. If, in merit, she stands Colossus high above her latest vehicle, it did not seem to lessen one's enjoyment of the evening. It was a big night in the waning season, and its chief glory is the glamour that is Katharine Cornell.



Katharine Cornell

Sidney Howard is a cunning playwright. The union of his pen with the oft proven ability of Miss Cornell should be a combination devoutly to be wished. Now Mr. Howard concentrates upon a certain angle in small town life; specifically, upon a small college in that small town. The characters are almost wholly within the faculty of that college, a co-ed school, at that. The central figures are Elsa Brandt and her father, both German born. The old man is homesick for his Fatherland; the daughter is obsessed with her ambition to pursue her musical studies abroad. In their home on the campus the entire action of the three acts takes place.

Vardaman, underpaid and overworked instructor in English loves Elsa. The warm glow under the June moon, amid the roses, is what Cecil has her heart; then she had listened to him now is something else again. By the sudden method which Mr. Howard knows so well how to use, Conway gets one of the prizes of the college, a scholarship among the threads of the plot. He too falls in love with Elsa and in time with him. He has a wife who he is eager to shunt to one side. Conway Darby is of a like approach with an offer to pay the girl's expenses to Europe with a sly suggestion, or to her apparent expectation, that he would be taken along as a kind of extra marital baggage.

Stirring Climax

Through interesting passages, excellent comedy, excellent emotional drama, the plot amiably moves. The tempo is rather slow; action, slight. Until the close, when the play goes hectically melodramatic. Vardaman finds Conway and Elsa together, draws his revolver—for a few minutes suspense hangs heavy. Then the English instructor solves the triangle without use of mathematics—the gun turns the trick. Over the body of the cadet Ring Lina's words—she will not marry Conway—Vienna is her home!

In no way does play, or role, measure up to the stature of Katharine Cornell. The artist is superior to part, and to theme. Yet her very presence and the presence of superior talent about her, give the stage its most noble brilliance. It is not the fault of the players if A. Crime be but another experiment like Laurette Taylor's never so financially successful. It is simply to be regretted that the theme is, for Miss Cornell, merely a minor excursion into the land of Neurotica, which is a realm found in big towns, and little ones. Vardaman is a hopeless neurotic; Elsa hardly less so.

But the galaxy of stars is shining which is something to be grateful for. Miss Cornell is always herself and she will dominate by the sheer power of her art. Few can read lines like this First Lady. Witness the audience reaction as she swims through one of the longest speeches on record in "Alien Corn" adds naught. It certainly does not dim the lustre of this actor's greatness.

Capable Cast

All the roles are capably filled. As Elsa's father, Siegfried Rumann is a revelation of might in word and in pantomime. He is the most skilled male of the stage seen since Walter Connolly opposite Helen Hayes in "A Good Fairy." And the movie makers should take a tip, and get this man a screen test.

James Bell as Conway Lily Cahill as the wife in a hilarious episode of [illegible] Jessie Bates, Charles D. Brown and E. J. Ballantine are among those deserving special praise.

Through a conspiracy of real actors and actresses, "Alien Corn," even if not an outstanding play, becomes engrossing entertainment.

Diana Wynyard gives John Barrymore that deep-down look of soulfulness in "Reunion in Vienna." This great picture is scheduled to come to the Loew's State screen next Friday.

FRANCES FULLER TO MAKE SCREEN DEBUT

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS

Motion Picture Editor, Universal Service

Copyright, 1933, by Universal Service, Inc.

Los Angeles, May 16—Prepare yourself to meet a new screen actress. Her name is Frances Fuller. She is about the size of Helen Hayes, black-haired and according to one of our scouts, sweet and wistful and attractive. She comes from the stage where she played the lead in "I Loved You Wednesday," "Front Page," "Five Star Final," etc.

Paramount signed her and her first screen role will be the feminine lead in "One Sunday Afternoon," opposite Gary Cooper. Ever since "Farewell to Arms" Paramount has been looking for a girl who resembles Helen Hayes for never has there been a better team than Gary and Helen Hayes.

De Mille a Friend

Here is one thing we must say for Cecil De Mille. He is faithful to his old friends. Charles Bickford was given his first big chance in "Dynamite" opposite Kay Johnson. At that time Bickford was criticized for not being entirely loyal to De Mille when he stole disparagingly of the picture, which, incidentally was a money-maker. Apparently De Mille has overlooked Bickford's garrulousness for he has now put him into the lead in "This Day and Age."

Silvers to Hollywood

The originator of the Stooge gag and the first Stooge in captivity, Sid Silvers himself, no less, is coming to Hollywood. He has been signed by the Fox Co. for the comedy lead in "My Weakness." Lillian Harvey's next picture

Wynn Out of It

The fire chief and his gags won't be seen on the screen this season. Ed Wynn and Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer in plain language have come to a parting of the ways. Wynn, who was due here for "The Hollywood Revue," has let it be known that he just can't keep the engagement. Several reasons are given but the real truth is that Wynn is all tied up on his radio contracts to say nothing of previous stage plans.

Snapshots of Hollywood:

Every day ALAN DINEHART and MOZELLE BRITTONE eat luncheon at Sardi's cafe. CLAUDIA DELL eating a careful diet luncheon at the same place with WILLIAM ANTHONY McGUIRE. CHARLIE CHAPLIN spending most of his time in Wilmington supervising the remodeling of his new boat. Will it be a honeymoon craft for him and PAULETTE GODDARD? SUE CAROL and NICK STUART, although rumored living under separate roofs, ate luncheon together. DON JAMES GLEASONS home again. DOUGLASS MONTGOMERY discussing plays and books with HAYARD VEILLER and JEANIE MacPHERSON. HAROLD LLOYD and DOUGLAS FAIRBANKS wandering into the Beverly Brown Derby for a very late luncheon. They joined a luncheon party composed of COUNTESS DI FRASSO, COUNT CAREGGNA and LILYAN TASHMAN. BLOSSOM SEELY, very well known as an entertainer, due here to look the picture situation over. EDGAR SELWYN dining with a pretty lady at the Montmartre. CAROLE LOMBARD all in spring clothes lunching with JOHN PANET. RICARDO CORTEZ and RUFUS LE MAIRE. That's all today. See you tomorrow!

Opportunity for Song Writers

Lew Pollack, one of the foremost song-writers in America, during his stay at the Keith-Boston, offers a Boston composer an opportunity to have his or her song published. Pollack says he feels that by encouraging song-writers in Boston to come to see him, he will find a worthwhile composition. He has designated tomorrow as the time for these Boston song-writers to come visit him in his dressing at the Keith-Boston, between 8 and 9 o'clock.

'Cavalcade' on Screen; Gala Stage Bill

By HARLEIGH SCHULTZ

Last call! "Cavalcade" is so important a film that its final appearance in a major theater calls for a warning to see it now. The great dramatic pageant of the screen holds the feature place on the Scollay's silver sheet, this week; we have seen it twice and could enjoy it a third time. For the new stage bill, Manager E. A. Vinson offers another B-g Light program, with several particularly bright spots, the highlight being one of the best adagio turns we have glimpsed in [illegible].

The show on the boards gets an unusually good start. Don Ricardo is a young juggler of vast dexterity; he has a big bag o' tricks, and reveals them all in fast time. Then George Lyons and Roxy LaRocco are a couple of harps, instrumentally of course. They are skilled musicians, play together and singly; and then like turns at singing. The experts act, Black Pepper & Co. present a delightful dance revue, beautifully staged and danced. All the specialties get much applause.

Paul Mall, chap in blackface, singing and pattering along, handles popular numbers deftly and with good voice. After him come the Reeves Quadruplets, four blonde lassies, who work hard and please the house.

Dorothy Martin and her troupe are the show-stoppers. They call it a dancing interlude; it could be a full fledged revue. But best of all, it rejoices in having an expertly swift adagio feature, whereas a young lady is tossed about, first by a young Apollo, and later by three youths. Some of the routine is new, and all of it is artistically achieved.

Bobby Pinkus and Roy Sedley next appear; they try to live up to the ballyhoo that they are the "two craziest people on earth." The Honeys close the show; and they are honeys at the finish stuff, all seven of the family. They get plenty of handclapping and go off to smash plaudits.

DeMarco Girls First to Win Orpheum Chance

The DeMarco Girls have been selected by Manager Victor J. Morris of Loew's Orpheum as the first of a series of local radio and stage attractions to appear weekly at the theater. The DeMarcos commence their engagement next Friday.

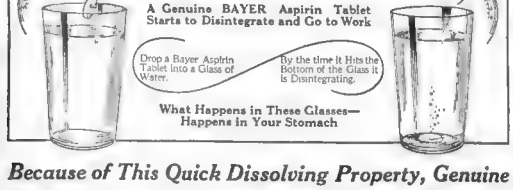
When You Go to Buy Aspirin

and Want to Get Rid of Pain Quickly



IN 2 SECONDS BY STOP WATCH
A Genuine BAYER Aspirin Tablet Starts to Disintegrate and Go to Work
Drop a Bayer Aspirin Tablet into a Glass of Water.
By the time it Hits the Bottom of the Glass it is Disintegrating.
What Happens in These Glasses—Happens in Your Stomach

Because of This Quick Dissolving Property, Genuine BAYER Aspirin Tablets Start "Taking Hold" of Pain a few Minutes after Taking

If you have a headache or any other common form of pain—rheumatism, neuritis, or neuralgia—you want to get rid of it as fast as possible—and in absolute safety.

Then—the first thing to know is this:

Never ask for aspirin by the name "aspirin" alone. But always say "BAYER ASPIRIN."

For what happens in those glasses happens in your stomach.

Because of a unique process in manufacture, Genuine Bayer Aspirin Tablets begin to dissolve almost INSTANTLY in the stomach. They start to disintegrate within the amazing space of two seconds after touching moisture.

Hence Genuine Bayer Aspirin "takes hold" of the average pain or headache within a few minutes after taking. The fastest, safe relief, it is said, ever known for pain.

Remember, it is Genuine Bayer Aspirin which lays claim to this unique, quick-acting property.

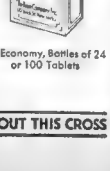
So be sure you get the Real Article—GENUINE BAYER Aspirin when you buy. Naturally you want the fastest, possible relief—and that's the way to get it.

The sure, safe way is to see that the name BAYER is clearly stamped, in the form of a cross, on any tablet that you take.

Keep that in mind when you buy. Carry in mind, too, that Genuine Bayer Aspirin Does Not Harm the Heart.

Ask your druggist about the recent price reduction on the 100 tablet size Bayer Aspirin.

For Pocket or Purse, Tin Boxes of 12 Tablets



For Economy, Bottles of 24 or 100 Tablets

MR. BOSTON

By JACK CONWAY

I find that Average Mister Baseball Fan is talking about the Red Sox again. With the Sox back home with the Browns as their opponent in the first of a series against Western clubs, I look for renewed interest in Tom Yawkey's club

MR. BOSTON

Boston for years was known as an American League city. The high calibre of the American League clubs here was responsible for this condition. The National League had tough sledding until 1914 when the Braves won the pennant and defeated the Athletics in four straight games in the world's series.

The late Harry Frazee did more to wreck the Red Sox than anybody else. He sold star ball players much like a merchant would his stock in trade. Frazee at heart was a theatrical producer, and he never had any great love for baseball. When one of his shows needed money, he would sell a ball player.

Frazee got $110,000 from the Yankees for Babe Ruth, while he later received $250,000 when he sold Herb Pennock, Everett Scott, Waite Hoyt and Sad Sam Jones to the Ruppert outfit.

A week after signing an agreement to sell the Sox to a Columbus syndicate headed by Bob Quinn, the Yankees offered $100,000 for Howard Ehmke, who was then one of the star pitchers of the American League. Frazee called Quinn on the long distance telephone and asked him if the agreement of sale could be altered so as to permit him to sell Ehmke. Quinn refused his request.

Quinn tried hard to build up the Rex Sox, but one deal after another failed to bring the expected results.

Yawkey and Collins Make a Winning Combination

Bob Yawkey has inherited wealth amounting to $20,000,000. He says he is prepared to pay $200,000 for new players. Yawkey is fortunate in having Eddie Collins as his general manager. The latter is a keen student of baseball, and knows the capabilities of the various outstanding men in the majors and in the Class AA minor leagues.

If the Red Sox are to get a winning ball club quickly, they must secure seasoned players. Collins knows that it is a matter of five or six years' time to develop a promising youngster into a first class major league player. Of course there are exceptions to this rule, but one must admit there are few of this type of player around.

This is why Collins has secured experienced players in his latest trades and purchases. After the club hits a winning stride, it will be possible to experiment with an occasional youngster.

The acquisition of George Pipgras from the Yankees and Lloyd Brown from the Browns should help the Sox pitching staff. Rick Ferrell, who was secured from the Browns, is a first class catcher and a .300 hitter. Bill Werber, who comes from the Yankees, is a promising shortstop.

Give the Red Sox pitching and catching strength and they will be up in the flag fight. The team has plenty of batting strength. In its recent Western invasion it scored more runs than the opposition, while it also outhit rival clubs. Its weakness was in the box.

I note that Tom Oliver, who wore out several pairs of baseball pants sitting on the bench, batted for .322 during the Western trip, getting 10 hits in 31 times at bat. Oliver was put into the lineup after I pointed out the weakness of the Sox outfield in fielding, and how Rebel Tom could help improve matters. Oliver is one of the greatest ball hawks in either league. If he can continue hitting the old agate he will prove a mighty valuable player for the new Collins machine.

Yawkey has the money, Collins the baseball brains. This combination should be able to give the Red Sox a team which at least will keep out of the cellar and eventually get the urge to go places.

Don George Certain to Give Lewis Furious Battle

The champion appears to nurse a grudge against the Strangler. He is more eager to defeat the former champion than he is to toss Jim Browning or Jumping Joe Savoldi. I believe this is due to the fact it was Lewis who defeated George two months after the latter first won the title from Gus Sonnenberg. The Strangler shattered George's dream of international fame and a million-dollar fortune.

A little more than two years later George feels he is better equipped to even the score with his conqueror. It would be almost too bitter a pill to swallow if Lewis were to defeat George again. That is what the Strangler plans to do. If he succeeds, George will go down in wrestling history as the man who was never able to hold the world's title for more than two months at a time.

Random Shots at the Target

Contrary to general belief, Joe Mowry, new Braves' outfielder, is not the son of Mike Mowrey, former National League baseball star . . . Joe's dad once played in the National League for two weeks when an injury sent him back to the minors . . . His first name was Joe, like that of his illustrious son . . . He also did not use an "o" in the spelling of Mowry like old Mike does . . . At that Mike Mowrey would be mighty proud to have a son who could play ball as good as Joe Mowry . . . The Brouillard-Slaughter bout at the Arena tonight should prove to be a good fight, and will determine just how much interest there is in the boxing game in this city . . . Lou and Sammy both like to punch, and have the courage to let their punches fly.

Harvard, Yale Crews Race at New London, on Coast

The Harvard and Yale varsity crews will meet twice this year as a result of Yale's acceptance yesterday of an invitation to visit the Coast. Harvard accepted the invitation a week ago, and Monday the Yale authorities tendered a formal answer after Coach Ed Leader had unofficially received a personal request for the Eils to attend.

The Crimson and Blue eights will meet in the annual regatta at New London on June 16. The Thames race will be over a four-mile course immediately after the races Coaches Whiteside and Leader will commence training their charges down to the 2000-metre distance of the Coast rowing event.

The events approximately to a mile and a quarter, which the Crimson varsity has never rowed. Whiteside's crews are trained for the longer distances and are not unusually fast in a sprinting race.

—By BILL CORUM—

New York, May 16 (US)—I went back to the old concrete college campus at Columbia University yesterday to renew my youth and watch the spring training, and found it pretty tame.

They are getting to be a lot of sissy fighters up there. Scarcely anybody was hurt and only three were arrested. What sort of college spirit is that? I guess the old school ain't what it used to be.

When you and I were in school, a left winger was a southpaw pitcher, who spent afternoons such as yesterday [illegible] working [illegible] a left winger [illegible] around [illegible] Alma Mater, or How I Love Freedom, or College for Henderson.

COLLEGE WORLD CHANGED

These modern left wingers probably never heard of Andy Cranley, the Columbia baseball coach, but they can tell you plenty about Marx and Stalin and Hitler, proving that the college world has changed, and possibly not for the better.

They were getting ready to burn Dr. Nicholas Murray Butler in effigy, when we decided to go ahead and leave them to their childish pranks. I was the last thing on Morning-side Heights when Dr. Butler, in effigy, was about ready for the bonfires and Dr. Butler, in person, will make Dr. Hi Ho.

Not that everything is over with as it should be at Columbia. Indeed, as an old grad with a voice, I am thinking seriously of starting a movement of my own that will demand to know:

There is room for liberal education in the field of shame of Alma Mater.

Dartmouth has turned out Jay Gamble Gus Sonnenberg, the inventor of wrestling's flying tackle. Illinois has responded with Jim McMillen. Yale has contributed Twenties Century Milstead. Herbie Freeman is a product of whom C. C. N. Y. may well be proud.

Good old Georgetown stands solidly behind Sam Comerford. Maryland has showed 'em and wow! can with Jim Browning and his scissors spin. But where is Columbia's contribution to the most notable profession now open to a college graduate?

LION STATUS NEEDED

For shame for shame. There is no excuse for the hide white in the Curley herd or the Bowser bruisers.

It isn't as though wrestling isn't artistic as well as profitable. Didn't the ancient Greeks, seven years previous to the Wrestlers for prosperity in stone? And aren't they proud of their grapplers than they were of their statesmen?

And at this particular time wrestling seems to be the only field open to an ambitious college graduate. So what's the college graduate of this game to do? The answer, of course, is wrestle. And I regret to report that Alma Columbia my alma mater, has not met this challenge squarely.

All of which is why we are going to call for another student strike on Morningside some time soon—to open the university's eyes to the importance of wrestling. We expect to get plenty of marchers in our parade. They'll march for anything at Columbia these days.

SOUTHPAW LOU HANGS HOPE ON RIGHT HOOK

Arena Program

6 ROUNDS
Al Brouillard vs. Joe Benet.
Dick Maloney vs. Bucky Tracey.
6 ROUNDS
Chocolate Bon Bon vs. Irish Joe Sullivan.
Vernon Cormier vs. Pinto Dessa.
8 ROUNDS
Joe Delmont vs. Nap Proulx.
10 ROUNDS
Lou Brouillard vs. Sammy Slaughter.

By JACK CONWAY

Nobody has ever accused either Slaughter or Brouillard of being fancy boxers. Both young men climbed the ratio heights by knocking the opposition bowlegged with sturdy punches.

LOU PUTS ON WEIGHT

Since losing his title Brouillard has picked on weight. I tipped him [illegible] now he tipped from 147 to 160 pounds within a year.

"By having my tonsils and adenoids clipped," replied Lou, "Once I was operated upon I began to pile on weight. I also felt stronger. Do you know I have had trouble getting down to 160 pounds for Slaughter? I'm a real big guy now."

Lou used to do his stuff in orthodox style, left hand out, right hand pulled back for the kill. He had some ribs cracked on his left side, and decided that if he turned himself around he would give the leather-members better protection. As a southpaw Lou has done well. He may aspires to win the world's middleweight championship.

Marcel Thil the Frenchman who won the title when he defeated Ceferino Jossen on a foul refuses to [illegible] his country. Ben Jeby, recognized as champion in New York, and Gorilla Jones, the N. B. A. champ, are under suspension for the varsity duty is John McDermott.

McDermott has been working for control all season. He has a world of speed and plenty of stuff on the ball, but his wideness offsets his good mound qualities.

It is likely that Mitchell will hold McDermott under control until the first Yale game at New Haven, as he did with Loughlin a year ago.

So far Loughlin has been the only real winner on the squad, with four league victories to his credit. The Concord lad has been forced to shoulder the entire burden of facing league teams, because of the lack of dependable boxmen.

Coin Falls for Lou

Jack Conway's famous magic coin today named Lou Brouillard to win over Sammy Slaughter in their bout at the Arena tonight. The coin's 1933 record:

W.	L.	P.C.

BOUT IS A NATURAL

If Brouillard and Slaughter can come through with a first class fight tonight, the winner can have anything up as a natural. The boxers are fairly evenly matched, and each is aggressive and likes to punch.

Joe Delmore of Roxbury and Nap Proulx of Taunton will clash in the semi-final eight rounds.

Al Brouillard of Worcester, a brother of Lou, will oppose Joe Benet of the West End in a four-rounder.

Chocolate Bon Bon of Boston and Irish Joe Sullivan of this city are listed for six heats. Vernon Cormier of Worcester and Pinto De-Sa of Portugal.

Rindge Tech Tops Keith Academy, 5-2

SWEET SOLOIST ON THE SOCK DRUM

DOCTOR CLAIMS BAER PHYSICAL MARVEL

BY PAT ROBINSON

Atlantic City, May 16 (INS)—Max Baer must be after Gilda Gray's shimmy-shaking title as well as Max Schmeling's scalp. At least, such appeared to be the case today, when he came up with a new freak accomplishment while undergoing a toe-to-top examination by Dr. Ted Senseman, senior surgeon and director of the Atlantic City hospital.

Dr. Senseman had just finished pronouncing Baer "the finest physical specimen he had seen in more than 25 years of medical practice," when the irrepressible Maxie piped up

"That's swell, Doc. But did you ever see anybody who could a this"

SHIMMY SHAKER

Max then proceeded to wiggle his chest muscles like a shimmy shaking burlesque dancer while the doctor's eyes opened in amazement.

The doctor went over the Baer landscape for the edification of the visiting scribes. "Look at the development of this latissmus dorsi," said the doc, pointing to a muscle in Baer's shoulder. "I have never seen such development there. That's where he gets his tremendous punching power.

"And note this pectoralis minor muscle in his chest. Never saw anything like it. Why it can be seen with the naked eye and usually is not noticeable."

As he pointed out Baer's "points" Maxie wiggled every muscle from his washboard stomach covering to his shoulder. Dr. Senseman said Baer's stomach is so encased with muscle that "it seems hardly possible for any ordinary blow to do him much harm."

ADVISES DOCTOR TO BET

But, of course, the good doctor has neither seen nor felt one of Max Schmeling's left hooks to the midriff and those babies must be felt to be appreciated.

However, Baer assured the doc he could make a little dough for himself by betting on Max, the "handsome lad from the coast—and I quote him straight on that one."

Diamond Dust

—By JOE CASHMAN—

The Red Sox reduced to 23 players by sending Outfielder George Stumpf to their Reading farm under option.

The New Orleans boy should burn up the New York-Penn circuit for Bob Quinn's entry. He hits, fields and throws well enough to play in some big league outfields.

The Sox squad of 23 consists of nine pitchers, six infielders, six outfielders and two catchers. Optioned players in addition to Stumpf include Gordon McNaughton and Allen Jones at Reading, Eddie Connolly at Kansas City and Urban Pickering and Johnny Michaels at Montreal.

All the players let out by the Sox could have been named during spring practice with the exception of Johnny Watwood. He looked like a fixture in rightfield in the South and it was all but officially announced that Tom Oliver would be the first flychaser to go. Rebel Tom is today the club's leading hitter and regular centerfielder while Watwood is in Newark.

Several clubs are trying to pry Bob Seeds loose from the Sox, Eddie Collins reveals. He also reveals that none of them has a chance.

"Seeds is not for sale and that's final," announces the general manager.

"There's nothing to the report that Connie Mack was trade Perishaw, Grove, Cochrane and Foxx," is another of Collins' announcements. "Connie told me he was through trading stars for the year when he let Simmons, Haas and Dykes go to the White Sox, and I've never known him to change his mind on such matters."

Rick Ferrell, Bill Werber and Lloyd Brown punch themselves several times a day to make sure they're Red Sox, they're so delighted over being sent here.

"I've been hoping to land here for 10 years," says Brown. "I feared I was doomed to stay in St. Louis for life," exclaims Ferrell.

EAGLES CHOICE IN N. E. GAMES THIS WEEK

By GEORGE W. GRIMM

Boston College, although defeated in dual meets with West Point and Holy Cross, entertains high hopes of defending its New England Intercollegiate track and field title at Tech Field, Cambridge, next Friday and Saturday afternoons.

The Eagles surprised at the Brown Stadium in Providence last spring piling up 21 points while Bowdoin finished second, two points in the rear.

And it seems as though Boston College has the necessary point winners to make it two N. E. titles in a row in this 47th set of games, [illegible] Johnny Mc[illegible] Bowdoin [illegible] the best from dame opposition.

Among the B. C. point winners a year ago who are back to help out Jack Reilly [illegible] are McMann in the 100, Jordan and Dolley in the half, Smith in the quarter and Conway in the shot and discus.

McMann finished fourth in the century in 1932. He has improved tremendously. Conley might take first in the shot from Tom Gilbane of Brown and likewise win the discus. And Ryder has likely candidates for points in Boland in the 880 miles and Moynihan in the mile.

If the best line up to expectations Boston College and the likely [illegible]

Defending champions back for the carnival [illegible] week-end are Pond of Tech in the 100 Adams of Bates in the 440, Jordan of B. C. in the half, Diner of Williams in the high romp McNally of Brown in the broad jump, Brown and Buonanno of Brown in the pole vault (they tied in 1932), and Gilbane of Brown in the shot.

3 Brothers in Open Golf Title Field

St. Louis, May 16 (AP)—Three brothers, Bill, Francis, and R. Schwarts, and Chester O'Brien, ... of St. Louis, qualified for the National Open golf tournament in Chicago, as a result of a district playoff between 24 players.

TAYLOR TO FACE TUFTS NINE

Harold Taylor, Harvard second ranking hurler, will get another big chance on a week when the Crimson plays Tufts on Thursday afternoon.

Coach Fred Taylor will reserve Eddie Loughlin to face Holy Cross on Saturday. The only other hurler on the squad who appears ready for varsity duty is John McDermott.

McDermott has been working for control all season. He has a world of speed and plenty of stuff on the ball, but his wideness offsets his good mound qualities.

It is likely that Mitchell will hold McDermott under control until the first Yale game at New Haven, as he did with Loughlin a year ago.

So far Loughlin has been the only real winner on the squad, with four league victories to his credit. The Concord lad has been forced to shoulder the entire burden of facing league teams, because of the lack of dependable boxmen.

American's "Typical Girl" in Stage Debut

Tomorrow night at Women's Club of the St. Mary's of the Hills parish, Milton, "Turning the Trick," a dramatic comedy, will be presented by members of the newly formed dramatic club of the parish under the direction of Rev. Gerard Shea.

The performance, starring Miss Lucy MacDonald, recently named "Most Typical New England Girl" in a contest conducted by the Boston Evening American, will be repeated Thursday night at 8:15 at the Reedsdale Road hall.

'Twixt Tee and Cup

Of the six New Englanders who qualified at Woodland for the United States open championship, four are Massachusetts professionals and the other two hail from Rhode Island.

Bobby Crowley of Norfolk led the field with a pair of 74's which was three strokes lower than Richard Hancock, Unicorn, runner-up. Little Charlie MacAndrew, Wollaston, tied for third place with Dick May, Misquamicut, with 153's, one stroke better than John Shimkonis, Andover and Joe Pezzullo, West Warwick, R. I.

Although he may not be the most brilliant player in New England, Bobby Crowley is the steadiest and his victory was a popular one, for the quiet, modest, young Norfolk professional has a legion of friends.

Sarazen Works Out

Gene Sarazen is working out at Charles Ever today. He has not played the Newton course since he was a member of the all-star foursome that opened that course. Sarazen was at Weston yesterday and had nothing but the highest praise of that layout, which he asserted is one of the prettiest courses he has ever seen.

The Eastern District come from behind to clinch the W. G. A. title at the Country Club. With the first five matches in, Eastern had not registered a single point, but starting with Miss Edith Stevens' one-up victory over Mrs. W. G. Dow, the new champions made a clean sweep of the last six matches, to win by one-point margin.

Dave Hackney's failure to qualify at Woodland was the only upset, despite the fact that some figured that Bobby Grant, New England amateur champion, and Charlie Claire would make the grade.

Alex Morrison is paid a big salary for advocating that the club should be brought back with the left hand. Yet Gene Sarazen has made a fortune in competitive golf by taking the club back with his right hand. Many duffers will trail along with the United States and British Open champion.

The Andover Country Club is planning to handle the largest field it has ever attracted for its open tournament, which will be a two day affair starting on Friday. Andover is not only in excellent shape but it is one of the most interesting courses to play in the state.

Woodland Boom On

After three years in the doldrums, the Woodland Golf Club is well on its way to another comeback. For years, Woodland was the best known and most popular club in New England but it did a nose dive a couple of years ago, from which it is now leveling off for a perfect three-point landing.

3 GAELS SIGNED BY BRAVES

St. Mary's in California has provided three more of its former star players for the Braves, according to an announcement by President George Marshall of the Boston professional football team.

The Galloping Gaels are Herb Fletcher, quarterback; Charlie "Rubber Legs" Baird, halfback, and Ike Franklan, an end. Mike Steponovich, former Gael, was signed by the Braves three weeks ago.

MEPHISTO'S GO HERE TONIGHT

Mephisto the German wrestler and holder of the light heavyweight championship title, will make his last appearance in Boston tonight at Mechanics Building before returning to Germany. His opponent will be Archie Campbell former Canadian hockey star and claimant of the light heavyweight championship of Canada.

Campbell has issued many challenges to Mephisto during the past year and is very confident that he can take the crown from the German.

The semi-final will bring together Ted Germaine of So. Boston and Jackie Nichols of New York. There will be three no time limit bouts with a fall to win—Paddy Mack, Penn. Univ. vs. Winn Robbins of Pawtucket; Sahib Siebeg of Turkey vs. Art Flynn of Boston College; and Briston Greene of Boston, the New England middleweight champion, will meet Bill Breks of Boston.

Looking 'Em Over

With

GEORGE UNDERWOOD

Bill Werber, new Sox infielder, learned his baseball at Duke University under the tutelage of Coby Jack Coombs, who made Kennebunk, Maine, and the Philadelphia Athletics famous . . . Remember that great 24-inning pitching duel way back in 1906 between Coombs and Joe Harris of the Sox? . . . Joe is a fireman in the Windy City . . . So is Dominick Mulrenan, the old White Sox hurler.

Coombs twice held up a big league game through odd accidents. It was when he came back with the Dodgers. In one game big Jack ripped his pants so badly a protecting cordon of players had to form around him. Safety pins were rushed to the rescue . . . Later in the same game Jack sawlowed a pebble and almost choked to death.

Jack once dropped in after a two months' hunting trip when he knew him. He had let his beard grow and looked like the House of David . . . What would Connie Mack give for a few Colby Jacks, now?

Back in Werber . . . The Yanks never would have let Bill go if McCarthy wasn't carrying four infielders . . . Joe said the solid Buffalo last year, and with Newark and Toledo in 1931.

Times are changing . . . The Yankees used to be buying Red Sox. Now the Red Sox are buying Yankees . . . What next? . . . They will have to go some before he catches up with the raft of players Jake Ruppert carted from Boston to New York . . . Yawkey-Collins regime good times are coming . . . The Dodgers are going to be the yodelling "Sweet Adeline" again, led by Honey Fitz.

SAVOLDI KAYOES SELF

LEWIS WINNER ON JOE'S DIVE TO CONCRETE

Special to Boston American

New York, May 16 (Commuting Labor mixture). Jumping Joe Savoldi drop-kicked himself over the goal posts, so to speak, in Madison Square Garden last night and landed on his head. When he awakened he was told that he had lost, in that manner, to Ed (Strangler) Lewis, former world champion, after wrestling impressively for 44 minutes, 32 seconds, before 9000 clients.

The finish was fashioned by a so-called hold which Savoldi, former Notre Dame fullback, has perfected only lately. It consists of a six feet first, with the opponent's chin as the objective. Savoldi did very well with it, just before the mat flooring Lewis twice and propelling him to scurry outside for ropes.

When he tried it later Lewis roughfully side-stepped, Savoldi shooting over the lower strand of the ropes, bouncing his bottom on the edge of the ring, continuing downward over the last remnant of a few newspaper men and smacking his head against sundry objects, including the stone floor. This tended to reduce Savoldi to a state of coma.

Savoldi did not bother to return to the ring. In fact, they carried him to his dressing room after bribing a crowd that gathered around him. Lewis beamed when Announcer Joe Humphries raised his hand in token of victory. He weighed 240 pounds to Savoldi's 202.

Due to the sudden turn in forcing Savoldi had the better of it, though there was no semblance of a fall in the first 25 minutes. At a half hour, Lewis scored a point by knocking the bridgework out of Joseph Joe's jaw. After that Savoldi made Lewis see the light of wisdom several times, and sneak up on the ropes as a matter of precaution.

Sonny Aims for Crown Go in Dean Match

By RINGSIDE

Jack Sonnenberg isn't willing to admit that he has been counted out as a leading challenger for the heavyweight wrestling championship of the world. The old Dynamiter, who tangles up with Man Mountain Dean in the semifinal to the Ed Don George-Strangler Lewis world's championship match at the Paul Bowser show at the Boston Garden tomorrow night, believes he is destined to regain his championship.

Gus has been training with the accumulation he displayed when he crashed into the wrestling game. He is as fast as he ever was, and there is still power in his flying tackle.

If Sonny can knock over the Man Mountain tomorrow night he will demand a match with the victor of the Lewis-George affair. He would like to see George who he has a feud to settle with the champion.

Sonny was the only collegiate man of prominence in the wrestling game until Don hailed into sight. Don garnered he could defeat Gus and then proved it in a bout in Los Angeles. The title went with George's victory. Strangler Lewis believed George of his championship two months later.

Now that George is back on the throne again, the old Dynamiter would like to toss him for a loss.

Lewis is wearing some kind of a frown today as a result of his win over Joe Savoldi in New York last night. Savoldi had been claiming the championship as a result of his win over Jim Loados some weeks back.

Fish 'n' Game

By WIN BROOKS

For the Fish-of-the-Week Club: A three-pound salmon from Long Pond, Plymouth, by J. K. Milliken of Dighton, a two and one-half-pound rainbow trout from Sandusky by Arthur B. Taylor; a seven-pound tautaug at East Wareham by Phil Ha'haway.

About Long Pond salmon fishing, in which there is increasing public interest, a few notes of Sunday's fishing. Whether the Chinook there will take a fly, a much discussed question, was settled to my own satisfaction at least as regards a small fish. He will.

We took several of 10 and 11 inches on Yellow Perch spoon only know it as the Southern Marlson and a small red and white bucktail with jungle cock "eyes." The only "perch" taken by the latter was one on shrimp. It had been feeding on shrimp and very small minnows. Nine undersized shrimp and two minnows were found in it.

Shrimp Lure Salmon

Big fish have moved into Deep Hole just around the west tip of Elmer Raymond's Cove. We fished the east shore, which is the leeward shore in a smart push west breeze. We caught probably 30 small salmon on shrimp.

Using seven-ounce rods in the wind we unfortunately hooked several of these so deep they were badly injured. That is something that will bother other anglers as it bothers me, but I don't see how it can be avoided in wind when the smart salmon of small common on a heavy rod may not be felt.

One solution would be use of larger hooks but a hook that is not robustic covered by a shrimp will not catch a single salmon in this clear water. On a lighter rod the smaller fish are more easily felt and can be struck before the bait is well taken, but there is always the chance of hitting into a 10-pounder with later regrets about both fish and tackle.

In the evenings, when the wind die, we had a remarkable demonstration of the Chinook's sharp eyesight. We tossed close to the boat a small handful of shrimp. A dozen salmon came in to 12 inches, shot up from the depths and took them on the surface or a few inches under. We did the same again and dropped a shrimp baited, No. 10 hook on 1X tapered green leader on with the others. Every shrimp but the one on the hook was taken. This occurred a dozen times.

Striped Bass Absent

Harry Markovitz fished Butter milk Bay for striped bass Sunday without results and natives reported no fish yet taken there . . . Markovitz, Sr., with Bob Hayes and other Bostonians, will make up a party heading into Maine this week for salmon fishing at Canton in Anasagunticook lake and Rapid river . . . New Hampshire will this week stock 6000 trout between 12 and 25 inches . . .

130 PROS IN U.S. OPEN FIELD

By Associated Press

The field which will set out in pursuit of the National Open Golf championship at the North Shore Club in Chicago, June 8, will consist of 120 professionals and 21 amateurs.

That much was determined when 99 professionals and 18 amateurs survived the annual sectional qualifying round and joined the 21 pros and two simon-pures who automatically qualified for the Chicago grind by finishing among the first 36 and ties in the 1932 championship.

A dozen well-known figures failed to make the grade. Among these were Chick Evans, Jock Hutchison, Gene Homans and Charley Yates. Roland MacKenzie, former Walker Cup player, withdrew just before play began in the Denver district.

Voice of Broadway

By Louis Sobol

Friday night, 54th and 7th ave., I run into Arthur Swanstrom and Lou Alter, singing to each other . . . "Thanks a lot for giving us that break a week ago on "There Goes My Last Year's Gal," chirps Swanstrom, "but wait'll you hear our new one, "Morning, Noon and Night." . . . "Here's how it goes—it's terrific," interrupts Alter. "Listen 'While you're in the sun, And You're dancing on the grave of love'—what do you think of that 'grave of love' and slave of love for torch?"

So I wander on, impressed with the intense enthusiasm of song writers in general over their own creations—fellows like Abner Silver, Mack Gordon, Harry Revel, Walter Donaldson—an enthusiasm I envy, for there's nothing that gives me quite such a kick as people who are frankly thrilled with their own work . . .

So I go to the He-Ha club and there follows a night of impromptu entertainment that keeps me until 7 in the morning.

Rector gets out on the floor and recalls days of old . . . Ted Lewis follows him with a few reminiscences and sings a few ancient melodies . . . Harry Woods, composer of practically every important hit of the decad , ripples tunes out of the battered piano, hundreds of them, and then introduces a little sweet-faced old lady, his mother, who sings "Annie Laurie" . . . She makes a speech, too . . . "Harry Woods," she purrs, "used ot be my son." "Now," she sighs, "I'm only his mother" . . . a remark which appears to move Milton Berle deeply, for this is one occasion when his famous applauding mama is not present . . . Eddie Davis chants "Stormy Weather" . . . Mickey Alpert warbles a torch melody, the name of which escapes me . . . B. B. B. sings and jests . . . Jay Flippen tells a golf story . . . and the sun begins peeking through the slit of a curtained window in the rear . . .

Friday afternoon in front of Lindy's, Eddie Canter passes by with Abel Green. The Canter pan is serious although what this fellow has to worry about I don't know, for here he is practically on top in three fields—radio, screen and stage. . . And not so bad as an author, thanks to his collaborator, David Freedman.

* * *

Wednesday night, with Seymour and Pearl Felix, I stop off at Buck Grundy's Man About Town Club and there linger awhile in the chur Schutt draws divine melodies out of the tiny piano . . . Gilda Gray is there and I learn she's to return to Milwaukee to appear in a night club there for the first time in years . . . Milwaukee, which has always prided itself on two things—beer and Gilda Gray who was born in her career there . . . Friday night, hungry for a sight of Barney Gallant's homely, honest looking face, I dash down to the Village and am met at the door by Barney, who asks me, "Are you in the market, Louis?" . . . "With what?" I rejoin. "What'll I use for money?" . . . "You're crazy if you stay out," he insists, so I walk away from him and peek into the dining room and there sits a trio in a close huddle together camaraderie . . . George Jean Nathan and the Messrs Simon and Shuster . . . Later in the Frolics Club, where Mickey Alpert informs me this is his last night at the place . . . Tuesday night at the Monte Carlo to giggle a bit over E. B.'s flippancies . . . Maurice, the magician, sits down and entertains us with a series of amazing card tricks and finally, in answer to my plea, shows me how to do one . . . So I practice it for ten minutes and in enters Milton Berle, whom I summon to our table . . . "Watch Milton," I urge and I start to do the trick, whereupon he takes the deck from my hands and does the trick for me—and five or six others . . . I feel considerably let down and by way of consolation, Maurice hands me a book he has written, entitled "Flashes of Wisdom," with which I am much impressed, particularly when I read such "Flashes of wisdom" as these: "Loose cats don't mind chasing flies when there are no mice about" . . . "A knife grinder is not so sharp as he looks" . . .

* * *

Monday night, I drive out to the Glen Island Casino, a romantic spot on the water's edge, and there sit moodily and brooding as Glen Gray's orchestra pours out soft melodies . . . Brooding over the days when I was 21 and eager for romance and when it took very little except a patch of a lake, a moon over the water, soft music and a wide-eyed gal to inspire me . . . And here I am 36 and a patch of a lake, a moon over the water, soft music and a wide-eyed gal only make me feel that I'm getting old . . . Saturday night, at Ben Marden's Riviera, where the three buttons, the Ritz brothers, toss me into a tittering jag from which even Joey Ray's pianistic "Farewell to Arms" fails to shake me . . . And thence over to Harlem, to drop in on the Ansonia Club just in time to hear the sepian Gladys Bentley chant a slightly strabismic ditty about the lad and the gal who suffered and to spot the snooty Caucasian gal, Betty Sheridan, watching and applauding . . .

Radio Racketeers Thrive

By AIRCASTER

New York—The native Broadway clans have a quant method of weighing the importance of an industry—and of an individual whose labors include the professional plodding of the metropolitan mudsill. An industry, for instance, becomes to the Broadwayites a moneyed and therefore successful institution when it has developed a sufficiency of parasitical off-shoots, known to the trade as rackets.

* * *

Measured by Broadway's yardstick, radio broadcasting seems to have attained the heights of affluence, prestige, or something. There appears to be no limit to the off-shoots which its cycles. The gentlemen who nourish these illicit or near-illicit offsprings are the same who help columnists arrive by the simple expedient of promising to kill them off if they don't play and boost in the game. The columnist either plays, and the game goes merrily on—or he doesn't play and doesn't cringe before these threats—and becomes a notable, or something with one foot in the grave.

Most crude, but not the least effective of the radio rackets, of course, is that taken from the underworld cesspools. It is the trick of selling "protection" to artists in the big money. A victim gets so much to a bodyguard for the privilege of not being kidnaped or beaten. If he fails in the pay-off, he is bruised up or maimed by way of taking a lesson. Added to this, he is later framed into situations that have blackmail possibilities.

A nifty plan is practiced by a few unrecognized film concerns, some of which specialize in short features. Their head men plan half a dozen short features at a time, in which radio talent which has been adequately exploited on the air, is to appear—gratis! The film gents work it this way: They employ a member of the literati, preferably an influential commentator, to round up the talent, which, by virtue of his position, he manages to obtain without pay. The radio artists are corralled on a lot, work for weeks, and go home without the courtesy of taxi fare. And the literary gent pockets $1000 each for the "shorts."

TRAVELING GRAFT

There are, of course, some fine, honest and helpful schools where hot artists and neophytes to radio may be "polished" or instructed in voice. But there are others that constitute one of the meanest rackets extant. The racketeers in this case, mostly, are more or less itinerant, for obvious reasons. Roughly, this is the way they operate—

They visit a medium-sized town, set up an office and some sound apparatus, get the lowdown on local conditions and begin a canvass which includes one house in every residential block. They tell the fond mother of a school child for instance, that they are scouts in the field, looking for new talent for a famous children's radio hour. They have been to the public school, they say, and the school officials have tipped them off that the lady's little girl has a marvelous voice. They hint at big money and long contracts. The child's parents are heartened. An audition is arranged and held. But there's the gimmick. An "expert" detects a flaw in the child's voice. If she is to make a fortune for the family, she must take a few lessons, at so much per. The lessons over, and when the family has been mulcted of $100 or more the scouts fold their tents and vanish.

PETTY RACKETS

Among the jettier rackets is the song cousin system, by which publishers pay so much per broadcast to band leaders for exploiting a new ditty. Artists, too, collect surreptitiously, for popularizing new tunes. This grafting is in much the same class with the fake mail bureaus, where, for a fee, a radio performer, announcer or speaker, can arrange to have gushing, flattering letters mailed in from any part or all parts of the earth. This is not always safe, as shown in the case of the singer who arranged a flood of laudatory mail in advance of a program, which suddenly was cancelled. He's still trying to explain the letters.

SONG WRITING

The list of parasites should not be complete without mention of some of the phoney song publishing outfits which advertise that they will supply melodies for any lyrics contributed. A few of these outfits even promise to popularize such a song. If the lyric writer is really misguided enough to use the radio audience, will pay the publishing fee—and share "half the profits" with the advertiser. The lyric is submitted, the song is written, and usually is an atrocity, or purloined from a classic. Before he gets a nice colorful sheet with his picture and name on it, the sucker has spent $500 or more, and that's that!

If those persons could write music, they wouldn't need amateur lyrics—in fact, they'd go into business without consulting the public, as all legitimate song-writers do.

Underworld Joins the Breadline or Goes in for Other Crime

By DAMON RUNYON

[illegible]

There are two schools of thought in the underworld.

Some of the big "hooties" were multi-millionaires. The depression got em. Then went broke against the legitimate. That is to say, having amassed their fortunes illegally, they went in for legality. They made investments in the stock market. They built office buildings, and hotels.

They backed mercantile enterprises, theatrical ventures, real estate developments, and even [illegible]

LEADERS RISE AFTER MAKING SOFT START

New York, May 16—Leading shares rallied on the New York Stock Exchange today after making a weak start in which prices were off fractions to a point or more for numerous issues, although some resisted the early trend. Trading was quiet.

U. S. Steel, General Motors and American Telephone were firm. American Telephone's dividend action is due Wednesday.

GEN. MOTORS FEATURE

General Motors was the feature at the opening with appearances of an initial block of 8000 shares. Trading was moderately active. Cotton ran off 50 cents a bale. Both wheat and corn ended off a bit.

The financial community's attention was largely dominated by international affairs. Decision of President Roosevelt to outline the administration's foreign policy prior to Chancellor Hitler's announcement of his government's stand on armaments set Wall Street buzzing with discussions as to the significance of the dramatic move.

Interest was focused on the report of the Federal Reserve Board showing the condition of reporting member banks in 90 leading cities in the country. This was the first weekly report since the Banking Act of 1933 was signed by President Roosevelt. The report showed increases for the week ending May 10 of $30,000,000 in loans and investments, and $200,000,000 in net demand deposits. Another $72,000,000 increase in circulation of Federal Reserve notes during the banking holiday the week ending May 3 left the total unchanged at $3,783,000,000.

Up to the decline of 2¼ cents, but such prices were unchanged at about the previous close.

STEEL PRICES RISE

Despite this week's advance in General Motors, the outlook, as heretofore this company has been given about 80 per cent of the federal contract in this field. It has also a year and a half supply of copper advantageously contracted for. Which combination occupies a unique position, and it has ample financial resources to undertake important construction at this time, indeed, was a factor in enabling it to operate at a profit throughout the generally abnormal 1932.

The American Brass Co. has added several grades of brass products to its line at a pound, and copper products to be increased.

Numerous hundred workmen, idle for months, returned to their jobs at the Bethlehem, Pa., Three open hearth furnaces were charged on Sunday and will be in full blast by the end of the week. Other mills will resume operations.

Gain in Employment

Employment increased 4.6 per cent in the silk industry in April as compared with March and 3.4 per cent in April, 1932, Silk Association of America, Inc., reports. Machinery operations increased 4.6 per cent over the preceding month, while the number of broad looms, 16.3 per cent for narrow looms and 30.4 per cent for dyeing establishments, also showed gains.

R. J. Reynolds Tobacco Co. began operation of a night shift in its cigarette plant at Winston-Salem, adding 600 workers to the payroll.

BOND MARKET IS IRREGULAR

New York, May 16—Bond prices continued to display irregularity today, with a moderate recession in German government countersected by further sluggishness in domestic corporation issues.

The improvement in Reich liens as based on the recovery in the London market, and carried the 5½s up ½ points to 52, and the 7s up ½ to 55. The agricultural bank loans were in supply, however, with the 6s of July 1946 down 2 points to 32¾. United Kingdom 5½s also moved higher, gaining ½ point to 102¾.

Second-grade carrier bonds united lower, with the Southern Railway general 5s ranging 1¾ points to 80; Baltimore & Ohio 4½s down ¾ at 40¾. New York Central 4s off ½ at 80, and Pennsylvania Issue D off ¼ at 69¾.

U. S. governments were virtually unchanged, with minor variations the rule in the Treasury obligations.

High grade utilities were firm in restricted trading.

Grains Are Lower in Chicago Market

Chicago, May 16 (AP)—Grain prices underwent early setbacks today owing to the absence of aggressive support from buyers. Trade in all grades was relatively light at some time. Opening unchanged to ¼ lower, wheat afterward declined all around. Corn started ¼-¾ off, and subsequently held near the initial limits.

Worcester Plant Gets Big Contract

South Works of the American Steel & Wire Co., Worcester, are to provide millions of dollars' worth of steel and rods for the new San Francisco-Oakland Bay bridge to be erected at an estimated cost of $2,330,567. Exact value of the order not known. The job will mean steady employment for many men over a period of 18 months.

Pays Second Dividend

American Business Shares, Inc., declared a quarterly dividend of two cents, payable June 1 to stockholders of record May 15, 1933. An initial dividend of three cents was paid March 10.

CLASS OF 20 TO BE ORDAINED

Only 20 members of the senior class of 43 at St. John's Ecclesiastical Seminary in Brighton will be ordained to the priesthood this month, it was learned today. The remaining 23 will spend another year in study.

Seminary officials explained that ordination was not like graduation, and that seniors at the seminary were ordained only to fill the needs of the diocese as they arise. At present, it is possible for the diocese to absorb only 20 new priests.

Gossip About People You Know

THORE BACK FROM CAPITAL

Walter P. Thore of Saugatuck is back from a three weeks' visit to Washington. The "father of the old-age pension system" idea was planted in the State House where he has been a familiar figure for years.

SEES LOTTERY "PLOT"

Rep. Lewis R. Sullivan says that the newspaper legal affairs is holding his bill calling for the set-up of state lottery because of the fear that if reported out at the present time it would pass overwhelmingly.

CARNEY TO RETIRE

Peter Carney, deputy secretary of state, will reach the compulsory retiring age of 70 on May 18. Carney has been ill for several months.

MACKAY'S OPINION

Senator John Mackay of Quincy does not think much of the parimutuel bill. In opposing suspension of the rules to bring the bill up for immediate debate, the senator said: "A cabbage under any other name would smell as rotten."

REILLY HAS 'EM GUESSING

Chairman William Arthur Reilly of the Boston school committee has the political dopesters guessing again. Recently he stated definitely he will not seek re-election. On Sunday, speaking at a church breakfast in South End, he said the chances were 75 to 25 that he would not run this fall.

ARMSTRONG NAMED

Mayor Curley yesterday appointed John F. Armstrong of 20 Bullfinch st., Dorchester, a temporary first-class fireman in the park department.

SHIELDS FOR COUNCIL

Friends say that Director John J. Shields of the municipal employment bureau will announce his candidacy for city council from Ward 12, Roxbury, early in July.

DONOVAN SUPPORTED

City Councillor George P. Donovan of Ward 6, South Boston, states that he has received scores of promises of support in his coming campaign for re-election and that present indications are that he will be returned to office by a substantial margin next fall.

GLEASON CLUBS

Supporters of City Councillor Richard D. Gleason of Ward 9, Roxbury, who is to seek re-election next fall, plan to organize campaign clubs in every precinct of the ward.

HEIN TO RUN AGAIN

Officer Violates Game Laws! Ha!

It isn't the open season on muskrats but nevertheless Patrolman John Fitzgerald used his own judgment when he saw one ambling through Quincy sq. today and went after it.

He cornered the animal in the doorway of Carodonna's fruit store on Hancock st., opposite the First Baptist Church. The musk-rat attacked him as he missed several shots with his club. He then drew his revolver and killed it with two shots.

Sweatshop Wages a Disgrace to the Commonwealth

THERE are now more than 700 sweatshops in Massachusetts. The number is increasing daily.

THESE SWEATSHOPS ARE A RACKET.

They are a racket because they force starvation wages upon the women and girl employes, who are helpless to defend themselves.

They are a racket because they enforce unfair, cut-throat competition upon decent employers willing to pay their employes a living and saving wage.

They are a racket because they defy the laws and standards of the sovereign State of Massachusetts.

They are a racket because they live like parasites, sucking the health and strength of women and girls and poisoning and sapping the flow of trade of the goods produced by generous employers under high standards of wages and working conditions.

THE sweatshops are conducted largely by outsiders who came from other States into Massachusetts at the prospect of obtaining abandoned mill properties for a small fraction of their cost and at the prospect of acquiring for a pittance the labor of the women and girls who had been thrown out of work in the textile cities.

The people in the State of Massachusetts had struggled for three generations to enact the Minimum Wage Law, the factory code and the other progressive, humane legislation that has been the model for all other States to follow in affording protection to their working people.

In less than three years, however, these vicious, callous sweatshop racketeers by their inhuman practises have vitiated the high standards which Massachusetts sought for three generations to erect and then to maintain.

THE names of these sweatshop proprietors have been advertised to the world, as the law requires. But they laugh at the public scorn and defy the public sentiment. They seem to be interested only in the profits that can be wrung from the blood of sweatshop labor.

If the law can't reach them, the public can.

Already many of the reputable, high-minded commercial stores have declined to buy the products of the sweatshops. The Governor of the Commonwealth has ordered that none of the State's supplies shall be purchased from them.

If the public would follow these fine leads and refuse to patronize their products, the effect would be to hammer some decency into the heads of the sweatshop racketeers. They will follow their pocketbook, as they always have done.

THE BOSTON EVENING AMERICAN and Sunday Advertiser are printing facts about these sweatshops and their methods. These facts show miserable pittances of 42 cents to $5 a week paid to women and girls. The work is long and arduous and often under inhuman conditions. These pittances force the families of the workers upon the dole lists. They cannot exist on such wages. Therefore, these sweatshop operators compel the cities and the state to pay the greater part of the wages of their employes.

How long will the great Commonwealth of Massachusetts tolerate such conditions?

New Use for Sales Tax

It Would Pay Interest on Prosperity Loan

President Roosevelt has already made admirable progress toward improving the Federal credit.

He has not only contributed notably to balancing the budget through courageously putting into effect rigorous economics, but he also caused the National Legislature to act quickly and make available new public revenues from legalized beer and wines.

Since the job-creating aspects of the Presidential program, including accelerated public works and aid on semi-public and other projects, hinge on the quality of public credit, every element in the country should recognize the importance at this time of financial prudence.

The next step in taxation reform should be to supplement revenues from beer and wines with imposts from additional sources.

The tax on beer and wines is a sales tax.

In the public interest, the application of this tax principle should be broadened to include a vast array of other articles going into consumption.

The adoption of the general manufacturers' sales tax at the last session of Congress was prevented by an asinine revolt led by a demagogic group.

Apparently it has been misled by the fallacious argument that it is a tax on the poor.

It must now recognize that the dole of tax exemption has proved a futile gesture for the 12,000,000 unemployed.

Workingmen have a stake in sound economic measures which encourage full employment at satisfactory wages.

It is now reported that the Administration will wisely seek to drive home this truth by using either a general sales tax or a sales tax on certain selected commodities to raise funds to pay the interest and amortization charges on a proposed prosperity loan to finance public works.

Such a use of the sales tax would couple desirable tax reform, which would hearten employers of labor, with an economically sound program for priming the pump for economic recovery.

It is to be hoped that the Administration will make such a recommendation, and that Congress will act affirmatively on it.

How Bad Is Hull, If at All?

Frank M. Reynolds, who for thirty-five years was chief of police, says that the town of Hull is in the hands of the racketeers, the bootleggers, the rum runners and the gamblers.

If this is any more than a political swan song on the part of Mr. Reynolds, he ought to be invited to prove his charges and rid the famous old town of the vicious element which, he says, now dominates it.

Certainly a man who has been for thirty-five years a public official, receiving his salary from the town treasury, should have enough affectionate interest in the town's welfare to aid in establishing decency and good order for it.

Intelligence Test

Massachusetts ranks third among the States in "cultural-intellectual development," according to a recent test.

This was supposed to be a test of common intelligence.

Maybe.

But the reading of a primer or a history, for example, is only a test of your common information.

How do you handle that information, once you get it? That is the test of intelligence.

LISTEN, WORLD!—On Magazine Page Today.

Oh, Pay, America?

By Nelson Harding

Like the fairy tales of childhood,
In which dwarfs, both bold and cunning,
Often overcame and conquered
Powerful, but stupid, giants,

Is today's amazing story
Of the armed and husky giant,
Terrorized and apathetic,
Paying tribute to a pygmy.

Experience

My father told me that his father said:
"Of fortune's changes one must live in dread."
Graybearded, old and trouble-scarred and grave,
Twice he had lost what he had hoped to save.
But times were different; grown to be a man,
He took his chances when a boom began.

Riches seemed near. He heard it said by men:
"Those old-time panics can't occur again!
This pleasant prospect now is here to stay.
Prices of goods are soaring every day,
Markets are stabilized"—and then pell-mell
Something occurred and all old values fell.

My father warned me: "Son," said he, "beware!
Time was I thought myself secure from care.
I laughed at timid people, old and gray,
And on to fortune plunged my headlong way.
Then something happened. You may not recall,
But times were very hard when you were small."

Then came the boom, caught in its surge and swing.
I heard men say: "This is a lasting thing!"
And I forgot my father's good advice,
And just as he did I have paid the price.
So will our sons do when good times return,
Like men long dead, like us, they'll live and learn.

New York Day by Day

Olympian Flippances

NEW YORK, May 16—The Olympian flippancies of Lois Long and Dorothy Parker are constantly convulsing the town especially those discouri of culture about that modern Athena known as the Algonquin. To say nothing of the upper edge inerustating around Sutton Place. No dinner is a wow without 'quoting them.

Miss Long, the daughter of a minister and former wife of Peter Arno, is articled to The New Yorker for which she reports the dizzy confusions of the night clubs under the nom de fantasie "Lipstick." She is young, vibrant and d-wey with sophistication. Yet she will scribble:

"The old girl has been waltzing. All over the place. I showed the young folk a thing or two." And so on which gives the idea. The chatter of both Miss Long and Miss Parker are loaded with endless buoyancy but their cutting wisecracks have a seraphic glow which dulls the string.

Dorothy Parker was born Dorothy Rothschild in one of those widely named Jersey suburbs. Her poetry is in favor and one of her short stories captured an O. Henry prize. She promises publishers any material they ask and gives them nothing. But adds to gaiety of nations over the cocktail without price.

Miss Parker and Miss Long are the embodiment of the transition period of humor from yeasty medievalism to the modern edge that razors floating silk. It is the devastating sort that spares nothing. The saving grace is that more often than not the perpetrators turn it upon themselves.

Lionel and John Barrymore were recently woo-hooing with a five-figured offer to appear in a weekly broadcast—a detective mystery continuity. They were about to sign when they discovered it places their incomes in a higher tax bracket, giving the government 80 per cent of the sum. So they didn't.

Vincent Astor has poured several inherited millions into apartment ventures around Carl Schurz Park on East End Avenue. The bone was to give it the aristocratic aura of Sutton and Beekman Places, carved out of slums. It is ironic that the most sustaining publicity the Astor area received was when Ring Lardner date-lined radio critiques "No Visitors, N. Y." while convalescing at a hospital there. Hundreds of curious made in their business to ferret out the location.

Flushed days at Claremont Inn are mostly a memory but sometimes for dinner and often at tea this erstwhile mansion of Theodosia Burr so charmingly perched on a Riverside Drive knoll has goodly gatherings. Mostly starry-eyed romanticists who like to watch the ripple of the Hudson from window tables. Or see a setting sun shift the purpling palisades of Jersey into a crimble of marigold. Sometimes the chance-encountered beauty is heightened by the carillon in the Rockefeller church across the roadway, the finest in the world offering a chime of 66 cleartoned bells. Last evening as the splendor cast its loving glow, the carilloneur was pealing what sounded like Gounod's "Ave" and not since I thought a trans-Atlantic liner was turning turtle have I so devoutly wished I had been a better boy.

There is a windy reach beyond Claremont sweeping up to Grant's Tomb where a spurt of water gurgles from a hip-high stone shaft to assuage thirsts of passersby. A scholarly looking gentleman after quick glances about was filling his mouth and spraying the greensward though his teeth. From a car the figure suggested Dr. John Erskine, although I suppose it wasn't. But I'd like to think it was. Teeth squirting is the most skillful of my limited repertoire.

B. b w—meaning before bridge work—I so perfected the art I could fill my mouth with water and while conversing with innocents bewilder them with a sudden needle spray. It was done with a bland expression and was abandoned permanently one night in Foucar's bar in Cincinnati. My victim happened to be somewhat of a squirt himself, but instead of replying in kind doubled a hand that suggested a clown's glove and swung from the ankle. They still tell how, when Don Allen and Howard Acton fanned me to, I inquired warily if anyone else had been saved. I thought it an earthquake.

Wise Sayings

It is not in the storm, not in the strife
We feel benumb'd and wish to be no more;
But in the after silence on the shore,
—Byron.

He that will believe only what he can fully comprehend must have a very long head or a very short creed.
—Colton.

The most difficult thing in life is to keep the heights which the soul has reached.
—Biddle.
